Sharp Withdraws; Backs Trudeau

First Minister To Drop Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp today withdrew from the Liberal leadership race and called on delegates to the leadership convention to unite behind Justice Minister Trudeau.

Mr Sharp told a news conference his support for Mr. Trudeau is without condition. It was the first withdrawal of a major candidate for Prime Minister Pearson's job.

The finance minister said he had had no conversations with Mr. Trudeau on the leadership issue until he had telephoned him Tuesday about 11:30 p.m. and informed him he was going to withdraw and back the justice minister.

Mr. Sharp said his first-ballot support was better than the polls indicated and that he believes a "high proportion" of his delegates will follow his lead and back Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. Sharp told reporters his conversations with delegates across the country have convinced him that it is Mr. Trudeau who has both broadly-based support and the qualities to lead.

MADE ASESSSMENT

The 57-year-old minister said he had a duty to be realistic in his assessment of his chances for victory in the Saturday balloting. And this assessment had led to his decision to go.

He felt Mr. Trudeau could attract to his cause the kind of people who can give a new vitality, energy and thrust to the political system.

The finance minister's decision followed a late-start campaign which had been interrupted by defeat in the Commons of a government tax bill, necessitating his presence in Ottawa while other candidates toured the country.

Several workers for other candidates attended the news conference in the National Press Building. Workers for former trade minister Winters and Consumer Affairs Minister Turner were conspicuous.

Mr. Sharp said he was taking his action now to release his workers to work for Mr. Trudeau.

He said his campaign workers

Hopefuls Scramble For Votes

The remaining eight serious contenders began a wild scramble to win over Sharp delegates, said to number less than 200.

His withdrawal came just as the great mass of delegates began flooding into the capital for the Thursday start of the convention to pick a successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

The Sharp switch sharply increased the pressure on other leading contenders to make deals with lower-ranked hopefuls to counter the Trudeau campaign, given a substantial boost by Mr. Sharp.

Mr. Sharp called on the 2,450 convention delegates to unite behind Mr. Trudeau as other candidates and their organizations began the all-out convention-eve pitch for the support of the uncommitted.

At the same time there were early indications that Mr. Sharp's delegates were going off in all directions. Each camp was claiming some and some even provided names. It was impossible to say who got most of the Sharp people.

COULD BE RUNAWAY

Most of the deal speculation surrounds External Affairs Minister Martin, running second to Mr. Trudeau for first-ballot support in most polls. There's a common fear among many leading contenders that Mr.

113 Bombing Missions As U.S. Pouring It On

SAIGON (Reuters) — Carrier-based U.S. jets today bombed targets within a mile of the centres of two North Vietnamese cities as the military command again boosted the number of missions flown in the wake of President Johnson's announcement of a partial bombing halt.

A U.S. military spokesman said cargo transfer points one mile south of the centres of both Thanh Hoa and Vinh were blasted by jets streaking in from the Gulf of Tonkin.

The strike near Vinh, 125 miles north of the demilitarized zone, sent a surge of explosions and fires tearing through the storage facility near the transfer point as 500-pound bombs hit, the spokesman said.

He said a truck repair shop just south of Thanh Hoa, 90 miles south of Hanoi, also was bombed.

A total of 113 missions were flown Tuesday, eight more than on Monday and double the average number flown against the panhandle before Johnson's restriction.

STRIKE AIRFIELDS

The spokesman said other planes struck at two airfields, neither with runways suitable for MiG jets. One airfield was 22 miles northwest of Thanh Hoa and the other five miles north of Vinh. Both fields have been attacked before.

The new raids, one the third day after Johnson announced the de-escalation move, followed strikes Tuesday which went almost to the 20th parallel — defined in Washington as the bombing limit in clarification of the president's announcement. The spokesman said carrier-based jets Tuesday bombed a railway siding 12 miles north-northeast of Thanh Hoa in their northernmost strike of the day, about a mile from the 20th parallel.

WIRE BRIEFS

Strike Threat Eased

TORONTO (CP)—The United Auto Workers Union today postponed their strike deadline set for 10:30 a.m. Thursday until 10:30 a.m. Monday as negotiations with the Ford Motor Co. of Canada remained deadlocked.

Priests Leaving

NEW YORK (AP) — At least 711 Roman Catholic clergymen left the priesthood in the United States in 1966 and 1967, shows a survey report released Tuesday. The Roman Catholic group which made the survey termed the findings alarming.

Doctors Found Dead

BONN (Reuters)—Three West German doctors, missing in South Vietnam for about eight weeks have been found dead in a mass grave dug by the Viet Cong, the West German foreign ministry said Wednesday. LBJ Meets Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson met today for about an hour each with Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Dem., N.Y. The meetings were separate and the White House had almost nothing to say about either one. (See also Page 3.)

'WE NOW HAVE HOPE' —MARTIN

OTTAWA (UPI) —External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said today new Vietnam peace feelers between Hanoi and Washington bring hopes that "the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Martin pledged Canada's aid in setting up negotiations and enforcing a "durable and just peace in Vietnam."

"This move in itself is not an end to the war in Vietnam," Martin said, "but for the first time in years we can allow ourselves to hope—even to expect—that we are moving toward peace and that the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Buying Wave Sets Record On Wall St.

NEW YORK — Volume on the New York Stock Exchange today shattered an all-time record that was set only two days ago in the busiest week in the 175-year history of the stock market. (See story Page 14).

Sales poured over the previous record of 17.73 million reached on Monday, the day after President Johnson dramatically decided to de-escalate the bombing of North Vietnam.

The new record of 19.1 million shares followed reports that Hanoi had offered to make a contract with U.S. officials to discuss an "unconditional" end to all bombing in Vietnam and other "acts of war."

The high-speed ticker tape on the New York Stock Exchange ran an unprecedented 47 minutes behind floor trading as volume soared to a record 15,430,000 shares after four hours.

The Dow Jones average gained 5.15 points after having been up 13.12 at 11:30 a.m.

HOPEFUL STATEMENT BY THANT

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— Secretary-General Thant said today he is convinced "meaningful talks" to end the Vietnam war will follow "once all the bombing and other acts of war against North Vietnam are ended."

Thant repeated through a spokesman his belief that such talks "will take place even perhaps within a few days" once the U.S. warlike acts are called off.

He said he was "happy to note" that the initiative leading toward "the promising development of Hanoi's agreement to preliminary talks was taken by President Johnson "in de-escalating the war."

Bombing Dispute Fizzles

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Vietnam's move today in the direction of peace talks took some of the heat out of a row over credibility that some officials thought could provide a propaganda bonanza for North Vietnam.

Administration officials conceded Hanoi could make propaganda profit out of the disclosure that the portion of North Vietnamleft open to air attack under President Johnson's partial bombing ban is actually much bigger than it appeared to be in the president's Sunday night announcement.

Still open to bombing is the area in the southern portion of North Vietnam extending from the demilitarized zone to the 20th parallel. As the crow flies, the distance from the centre of the DMZ to the centre of the 20th parallel is approximately 232 miles. Thus U.S. planes still are allowed to attack 25 per cent of the North's land mass where 10 per cent of the population lives.

CHARGES WAS MISLED

Chairman J. W. Fulbright of the Senate foreign relations committee charged that he was "misled as to the significance" of Johnson's announcement and added:

"The stopping of the bombing is of no consequence and certainly not an inducement for the North to come to the conference table."

Both Senators Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy, candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, were critical of the bombing-area policy.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, defending the administration, pinned responsibility for any misunderstanding on the state department. He said he knew first-hand that Johnson wanted to define the exact line between the bomb-free area and the continuing attack area of North Vietnam.

"He was dissuaded by his diplomatic colleagues," Mansfield told the Senate, "presumably the state department."

'EXCEPT TO NORTH'

In his address Sunday night, Johnson said he had ordered air and naval attacks on North Vietnam stopped "except in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops

Preliminary Negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hanoi said today it is ready to talk about a complete U.S. bombing halt so peace negotiations can begin on Vietnam, and President Johnson said "we are very interested in it."

The response, an apparent shift in Hanoi's position, got top attention in Washington. However, U.S. strategists were unwilling to say immediately whether this means the breakthrough in long-stalled efforts to get peace discussions under way.

Hanoi's announcement came in a Vietnamese-language radio broadcast which was picked up by U.S. monitors, translated and rushed to the White House, state department and other key U.S. agencies.

It followed up Johnson's Sunday order to curtail U.S. bombing of the North as an inducement to the Communists to go to the conference table.

The announcement as translated said:

"It is clear that the U.S. government has not correctly and fully responded to the just demand of the DRV (North Vietnamese) government, of U.S. progressive opinion and of world opinion.

"However, on its part, the DRV government declares its readiness to send its representatives to make contact with U.S. representatives to decide with the U.S. side the unconditional cessation of bombing and all other war acts against the DRV so that talks could begin."

The White House had no immediate comment. Presidential press secretary George Christian said "We do not as yet have a full text" of the Hanoi broadcast and there would be "no comment until we have time to read and consider the text."

However a senator who was with Johnson when he received the report said the president was "very interested in this development."

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) told reporters after a call at the White House that the importance of the Hanoi radio statement is that the North Vietnamese have apparently agreed to some form of discussion without a complete cessation of the U.S. bombing as a precondition.

At Least a Step Forward

The two representatives that Johnson said in his Sunday broadcast would be standing by to join in any peace talks—Ambassadors Averell Harriman and Llewellyn E. Thompson—were in Washington.

Hanoi's response was regarded by U.S. authorities as at least a step forward from North Vietnam's earlier refusal to talk at all.

In Saigon, the English-language Saigon Daily News said President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam will fly to Washington next week for talks with Johnson.

Johnson said Monday he had invited Thieu to visit Washington for discussions on the Vietnam war.

It was still unclear from the initial Hanoi broadcast whether North Vietnam was still sticking to a demand that had been unacceptable to the United States: That there be an unconditional halt to the U.S. air assaults as a pre-condition before any negotiations can be started.

Johnson, in announcing the partial bombing halt in his Sunday night speech, repeated what he has termed his San Antonio formula.

Under this formula, the United States is willing to suspend the bombing if this will lead promptly to productive talks. It also carries an assumption that North Vietnam will not take advantage of the bombing cessation to push its drive against South Vietnam.

The Hanoi broadcast denounced the U.S. "war of aggression" and the continuation of that bombing which is still going on in the southern part of North Vietnam.

And it made no promise about a reduction in North Vietnamese infiltration against the South in reciprocity for the U.S. bombing reduction.

Nonetheless Hanoi's announced willingness even to talk with American envoys about ending the air attacks as a prelude to negotiations apparently caught even her Communist supporters by surprise.

The Soviet government newspaper Isvestia had just finished accusing Johnson of "carrying on a hypocritical game" with his Sunday offer.

The key part of the Hanoi broadcast—the offer to meet with U.S. representatives—was surrounded by the Communist

'FLABBERGASTED' BUT 'NO DEAL'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau said today he was "flabbergasted" by Finance Minister Sharp's decision to withdraw from the leadership race and support him.

Trudeau told reporters in Montreal before he left by train for Ottawa shortly after noon, that he was "naturally delighted" with Sharp's decision to support him.

"The decision of Mr. Sharp is a sign of his integrity and generosity — to do this without even consulting me," Trudeau said. "He just phoned me last night saying he was going to do this, whether I liked it or not."

Trudeau denied there had been "a deal" concerning a cabinet post for Sharp if Trudeau wins.

U.S. Opens Offensive To Relieve Khe Sanh

SAIGON (UPI) — Elements of three divisions of U.S. marines, 1st air cavalrymen and South Vietnamese troops opened a major offensive to lift the 74-day-old siege of Khe Sanh today and sent columns of allied tanks and infantrymen to within three miles of the besieged fortress.

The American air cavalrymen carried out a series of leapfrog helicopter assaults in Operations Pegasus against North Vietnamese from the east while U.S. marine tank and other armored weapons moved painfully along east-west Route 9.

The going was slow. At least 17 bridges were knocked out and mines were discovered every 100 yards as the Americans traveled the twisting mountain road that links the 6,000 marines and 1,000 Vietnamese at Khe Sanh with coastal supply areas.

By dusk tonight the column was still about three miles from the besieged base. Military spokesmen said there were upwards of 10,000 North Vietnamese troops surrounding Khe Sanh. Earlier estimates put the figure as high as 20,000.

WIFE CLUNG TO MIRROR DURING 25-MILE RIDE

Tried to Kill Her . . . But He's Worth It

WIGAN, England (CP) — Motorist John Rigby was fined £25 (about $65) in court Tuesday for "carrying a passenger in a dangerous manner"—his determined wife, Olive, perched on the car's front bumper.

Mrs. Rigby, the court learned, feared her husband was leaving her for another woman one wintry night. So when his car pulled away from home near this Lancashire town, Mrs. Rigby dashed out, jumped on the fron bumper and clung to the rear-view mirrors on the fenders as the car moved off.

Said Rigby, 46, who had pleaded not guilty:

"I kept putting the brakes at about five miles an hour to try and shake Olive off, but she hung on.

"I decided to give her a ride and drove to Wigan at 25 miles an hour. I couldn't go very fast because she was obstructing my view."

Finally after one mirror had snapped off and both windshield wipers broke as Mrs. Rigby grabbed them, the car ran out of gas. As the couple and the other woman walked homewards, the Rigbys were reconciled.

"I only had a suit on and one shoe," says Mrs. Rigby, 40. "It was freezing cold but it was all worth it to keep John."

BENNETT LEADS 'NO' VOTE

'Tough' Marketing Laws For Oil Firms Sidestepped

By JOHN MIKA

The provincial government juggled a hot potato committee report Tuesday which recommended tough laws to regulate marketing of gasoline.

The laws would protect non-brand independents and prohibit giveaway gimmicks.

It was learned that three Socred backbenchers, led by Cyril Shelford, broke ranks within a closed committee meeting to join five opposition MLAs in pushing through the report.

But Premier Bennett led a majority of his party in shouting an emphatic "no" when committee chariman Herb Capozzi asked the legislautre for unanimous consent to allow adoption of his report without notice.

Mr. Bennett later told reporters time is needed to study the report.

But Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) intends to file notice of motion quickly to bring the issue back to the floor of the house with a proposal that a crown corporation be established as a standby gasoline wholesaler for independents to ensure the two-price system is implemented.

The special committee report received by the legislature said

PRICELESS PAINTINGS RESCUED BY STUDENTS

ANTWERP, Belgium (UPI)—Hippies and students poured out of nearby dance halls and cafes today, dashed into a flaming gothic church and saved priceless paintings by Rubens, Van Dyck and other old Dutch masters.

Church and city officials had given up for lost the paintings, valued at $10 million by some experts and priceless by more, adorning the walls of the 16th century St. Paul's Church.

But police found the paintings safely stowed by the 60 youngsters in the cafes and dance halls next to the ruined church in this ancient port city.

"Thanks to the bravery of these young people, the paintings have not been lost to posterity," the church curator said.

and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

The president also said "the area in which we are stopping our attacks includes almost 90 per cent of North Vietnam's population, and most of its territory."

The wording used by the president created the widespread impression that he was talking about bombing within a range of 40 to 50 miles north of the DMZ separating North and South Vietnam. There are heavy troop concentrations and considerable military activity on both sides of that area.

HEAVIER RAIDS

Dispatches from Saigon Tuesday disclosed American bombers operating under the new policy had carried out heavier than ordinary raids throughout the so-called North Vietnam panhandle and had particularly struck at Thanh Hoa, 210 miles north of the DMZ and just a few miles below the 20th parallel.

Fulbright said he had called the president Sunday night to congratulate him on his bombing limitation and a call for peace talks, but added, "I was mistaken."

Mansfield said he spent three hours with President Johnson last Wednesday—while the policy decisions and formulation of the speech were under way. He said Johnson informed him that he would propose cessation of the bombing above the 20th parallel but continue bombing south of that line to protect U.S. forces along the DMZ and to try to block Communist supply trails into South Vietnam.

"He wanted to put in the 20th parallel," Mansfield told the Senate, referring to the president's speech. He then added he felt the state department talked Johnson out of being so specific.

The diplomats' concern, Mansfield said, was that public establishment of a line would mean the exact identification of the area of North Vietnam safe from bombing. He said the diplomats thought it unwise to set up a sanctuary in that way.

Mansfield said he hoped that the next time the president has a speech written "some kind of a word artist will be used who will not be able to fuzz a sentence or a paragraph so that it can be interpreted a number of ways."

Biafra Prepared To Negotiate

LAGOS, Nigeria (Reuters) — Biafra is prepared to negotiate a peaceful settlement of the nine-month-old Nigerian civil war without laying down conditions if Nigeria will do the same, a Radio Biafra broadcast said today.

The peace offer was in a statement made by former Nigerian president Nnamdi Azikiwe at the end of a visit to five African countries on behalf of the secessionist regime.

Azikiwe said he appealed to the heads of state of Senegal, Ivory Coast, Tanzania, Uganda and Zambia to use their good offices to bring about a speedy end to the killing of innocent civilians.

"Purpose of the meal is to give tangible evidence of our concern for the world's poor and hungry," says Michael G. Doyle, Victoria representative of the Canadian Catholic Organizatiin for Development and Peace.

"Millions subsist daily on the four-ounce rice meal we shall eat at the luncheon, and a collection will be taken in aid of overseas self-help projects."

CALCUTTA (AP)—About 900,000 villagers are starving in the Midnapore district of West Bengal state, about 80 miles southwest of Calcutta, because of a strike by Calcutta port workers, the newspaper The Statesman reported today. The report said the strike had halted the unloading of food for Midnapore, where floods last year badly damaged the crops.

Trudeau might run away with it.

Eric Kierans, former president if the Quebec Liberal Federation, said in a television interview broadcast Sunday that three approaches have been made to him.

His organizers maintained Tuesday, however, that he won't come to a conclusion until just before the balloting on whether to swing and when. Mr. Kierans, put close to the bottom in most polls, expects to have a firm idea of the level of his support by that time.

At least four candidates—External Affairs Minister Martin, Transport Minister Hellyer, Health Minister MacEachen and former trade minister Winters—claimed through spokesmen that each will have a high percentage of Mr. Sharp's delegate strength.

An aide to Mr. Martin claimed the external affairs minister will get 80 per cent of Mr. Sharp's delegates.

Mr. Winters' camp joined the rush for Sharp delegates and promptly announced that two of them—Ralph Gibson of Toronto, treasurer of the Ontario Liberal party, and Senator Nelson Rattenbury of New Brunswick—will vote for the former trade minister.

MEETS SMALLWOOD

Mr. Winters was at the airport to meet Premier Smallwood and the Newfoundland delegation. They were to lunch together and the Newfoundland delegation was to caucus afterwards.

An aide to Mr. Martin said the Martin camp is not unhappy about Mr. Sharp's withdrawal.

Mr. Martin would take as much as 80 per cent of Mr. Sharp's support on the second ballot

A spokesman for Mr. Hellyer said: "We already knew we had a substantial number of Sharp votes on the second ballot. We now expect to get them on the first ballot."

The spokesman for the transport minister said there is liaison among the various candidates' groups and that "various eventualities" had been discussed.

However, Mr. Hellyer was not involved in any "deals" and would promote none.

were unanimous in following his lead when he met them for breakfast today.

"I would have preferred to beat Mr. Trudeau but I prefer him to the rest," Mr. Sharp said.

He said he gathers talks are going on among some other candidates.

EXCHANGED SUPPORT

Mr. Sharp said his relationships with Mr. Trudeau have always been good. They had supported each other on vital issues in cabinet.

Mr. Sharp also said he is willing, no matter what happens at the leadership convention, to continue to work for his country in whatever capacity.

The minister said he and Mr. Trudeau had discussed their differences on constitutional matters in their conversation Tuesday night.

Mr. Sharp believed the differences had been exaggerated in public discussion, and centred more on the approach to negotiations over constitutional reform, rather than over the aims.

"I felt that perhaps Mr. Trudeau was somewhat more rigid in his attitudes than I preferred. But I believe it is not a matter of significance. It is probably an approach to negotiations."

He said at least three of the four cabinet ministers who had declared support for him would shift to Mr. Trudeau.

It is understood that two of the three are Revenue Minister Chretien and Mines Minister Pepin, both cabinet ministers from Quebec.

The other supporters have been Industry Minister Drury and Senator John Connolly, government leader in the Senate.

SURPRISE! DE GAULLE PLEASED

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle today described the U.S. move to deescalate the war in Vietnam "as an act of reason and political courage."

In his first public comment on President Johnson's limitation of U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, de Gaulle called the move "a first step toward peace."

However, de Gaulle pointed out that the bombing halt was "neither general, nor unconditional." This seemed to be a reference to North Vietnamese conditions that all attacks on North Vietnam must cease before peace talks can begin.

invective against the American actions in Vietnam.

The broadcast noted that even with Johnson's bombing restriction, U.S. planes are continuing to strike at "important areas" in the 200-mile stretch from the 17th parallel—the boundary between North and South Vietnam—up to the 20th parallel, well into North Vietnam.

It charged:

"During the past more than 10 years, U.S. imperialism has brazenly violated the 1954 Geneva agreements on Vietnam, endeavored to implement its interventionist and aggressive policy and waged a war against the Vietnamese people.

"It has schemed to partition Vietnam permanently and turn South Vietnam into a new-type colony and military base. The South Vietnamese people, united as one, have risen to the struggle resolutely to defend their basic national rights."

B.C. GROUP IN FESTIVE MOOD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost 200 Liberal delegates and alternates boarded a chartered jet at Vancouver International Airport today amid a festival atmosphere.

Carrying banners and wearing straw boaters, delegates were in high spirits as they headed for Ottawa and their national leadership convention.

Hellyer supporters were disappointed that Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp, considered a right-of-centre candidate like Hellyer, had withdrawn from the race to back Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau, regarded a left-of-centre social reformist.

"I'm terribly upset to hear Sharp has joined the Trudeau side," said delegate S. J. Dumaresq of Vancouver.

"I'm a Hellyer man," he said, pointing to his red hatband, "and I think the majority of B.C. delegates are."

'Unadulterated Lunacy'

CHESTER, N.S. (CP) — Retired Rear-Admiral Jeffry V. Brock, former vice-chief of naval staff and Atlantic coast naval commander, said Tuesday night that a federal government move to establish a new French-speaking destroyer crew based at Halifax is "sheer, unadulterated lunacy."

"It seems a little extraordinary," he said, "having gone to so much trouble and anguish to unify the services, and then before this program is complete to attempt to subdivide the sea branch of the Canadian Armed Forces."

Admiral Brock said he is "quite sure this will do nothing but add to what must be very great difficulties within the navy in providing the properly qualified officers for every specialized billet as sea."

Defence Minister Cadieux announced the plan for a French-speaking naval unit at Ottawa Tuesday. Later, Rear-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, the Maritime commander at Halifax, said the destroyer Ottawa based here has been designated.

Admiral Brock left the navy in 1964 in disagreement over the federal government's plan for unification of the armed services.

WIN ANOTHER PRIMARY

McCarthy Sees Victory Ahead, And Nixon Too

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Democrat Eugene J. McCarthy, triumphant with 57 per cent of the vote in Wisconsin's presidential primary, turned toward the arenas which pose the real test of his claim that he can win the White House in November.

And Richard M. Nixon added another trophy in his march toward the Republican presidential nomination.

"We have demonstrated here in Wisconsin the ability to win in November," McCarthy told his youthful volunteer workers after he trounced retiring President Johnson Tuesday in the season's second presidential primary.

Johnson got 35 per cent of the vote, but he isn't running anyhow.

"As you know, this is only a preliminary victory," the Minnesota senator said. "We have to go on to primaries in other states—some of them perhaps more difficult than this one." For in those other states, McCarthy will be matched against New York Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Nixon built a towering 80 per cent of the Republican vote to match his showing in New Hampshire's opening primary three weeks ago. He had no real opposition in either race.

The former vice-president said his showing proved that Wisconsin will be in the Republican column when the votes are counted next Nov. 5.

At stake in the primary were 60 Democratic and 30 Republican national convention votes, bound by law to the winner when the nominating conventions roll around in August.

McCarthy won 52 delegate votes and Johnson eight. Nixon took all 30 in the Republican column. McCarthy won eight of 10 Congressional districts, each with four delegate votes, and took the 20-at-large delegate votes as the statewide winner. Johnson won two districts.

BLANKET COVERAGE

Nixon took all 10 districts each with two delegate votes and the statewide 10 delegates-at-large.

McCarthy 402,340 votes for 57 per cent of the party turnout; Johnson 247,290 or 35 per cent.

Senator Robert F. Kennedy, the rival McCarthy will have to overcome if he is to be nominated, drew six per cent of the votes. But those were write-in votes, for his name was not on the ballot. And Kennedy had urged that people who favor him vote for McCarthy in Wisconsin.

Nixon's Republican landslide read this way:

Nixon 383,213, or 80 per cent; California Gov. Ronald Reagan 51,329, for 11 per cent, habitual candidate Harold E. Stassen 28,322, or six per cent.

Johnson's eight votes came in two Milwaukee districts, both bulwarks of organized labor strength. His slice of victory was in districts including the predominantly Negro sections of the state's biggest city.

McCarthy won a third district including some Milwaukee suburbs and carried the other 71 counties in the state.

Johnson's Sunday decision to stand aside and retire from the White House turned the Wisconsin campaign into a $1,000,000 exercise with no real contests.

Presumably, Johnson could later ask the delegates he won to support an active candidate, possibly Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, who is considered a possible successor to administration candidacy.

"Even though there may be a few more late entries," McCarthy said, "I don't think it will make a difference. We now know what the contest is."

McCarthy's late entry remark was aimed not only at Humphrey, but at Kennedy, who stepped into the presidential campaign after the Minnesotan had proved the breadth of opposition to Johnson by taking 42 per cent of the vote in New Hampshire.

McCarthy programmed a hectic day of campaigning, first in South Bend, Ind., where he will confront Kennedy for the first time in a May 7 primary; then in Hartford and New Haven, Conn., where 44 nominating votes will be allotted by a state convention.

Kennedy said he did not think McCarthy's showing would hamper his own presidential bid.

And he said McCarthy may have benefited "a great deal" in Wisconsin from Johnson's Sunday rejection of candidacy.

McCarthy didn't see it that way. "If he had not withdrawn, I think we probably would have gotten a heavier crossover of Republicans," he said.

Humphrey To Sit Tight?

WASHINGTON (WP) — There were strong hints Tuesday that Vice-President Hubert Humphrey would bypass the presidential primaries in hopes that Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy could win enough of them to prevent a bandwagon for Sen. Robert Kennedy.

That would set the stage for a three-way fight at the Democratic convention in Chicago, in which Humphrey's southern and labor support and the behind-the-scenes backing of President Johnson his supporters count on receiving could be brought to bear.

Bobby's Just A Barefoot Boy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Sen. Robert Kennedy was addressing 15,000 persons at a rally on a downtown street Tuesday when he remarked, "I'd like to announce that someone is taking off my shoe."

Voters Reject Anti-War Resolution

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An anti-war resolution calling for an immediate withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam was rejected by Madison voters Tuesday.

Residents of the Wisconsin capital city voted 58 per cent to 42 per cent against the proposal. With all 41 precincts reported, the referendum read: "It is the policy of the people of the city of Madison that there be an immediate ceasefire and the withdrawal of United States troops from Vietnam, so that the Vietnamese people can determine their own destiny."

The vote marked at least the fifth time an anti-war proposal has been defeated in municipal balloting. Similar proposals have been rejected in Cambridge and Concord, Mass., San Francisco and Dearborn, Mich.

Last month, voters in Lincoln, Mass., approved a call for an early reduction in the U.S. military effort.

Plane Downed By Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy patrol plane with a crew of 10 aboard was shot down by a Cambodian Navy vessel in the Gulf of Siam off the western coast of South Vietnam, it was learned today.

The 10 crew members were reported missing. It was assumed that a large-scale air and sea search was under way

The four-engined turboprop jet went down Monday, informed sources said. It was on a coastal surveillance mission to intercept gun-running Viet Cong trawlers.

The U.S. command refused to discuss the fate of the plane, presumably because of the ticklish situation between Cambodia and the United States.

'No Evidence Of Bugging'

REGINA (UPI) — Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher told the provincial legislature Tuesday night a two-hour search of opposition lounge and caucus meeting areas had failed to produce any evidence of electronic bugging devices.

The search had been ordered by speaker J. E. Snedger after New Democratic party suggestions that the government may have "bugged" their lounge, telephones, and caucus meeting room.

The premier charged that the opposition made similar "insinuations" when no one was around to check them up, but this time the RCMP search "had put the lie to them."

'En Garde' Newsman Warned

REGINA (CP) — The sergeant-at-arms in the Saskatchewan legislature told a Leader-Post photographer he would run him through with his sword if the photographer tried to take any pictures of RCMP officers checking two opposition meeting rooms for bugging devices Tuesday.

Photographer Peter Blashill said D. G. Scott Calder, the sergeant-at-arms, was asked to unlock a room for the RCMP. Mr. Blashill said Calder told him to drop his camera and turn his back and said he would "run you through" with his ceremonial sword if he didn't comply.

Asked today if he thought the sergeant-at-arms was serious, Mr. Blashill said: "I don't know."

SAIGON BITING THE HAND . . .?

By EDWIN Q. WHITE

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnam's press, closely censored and guided by the Saigon government, is showing up these days with more articles critical of Americans.

Part of the campaign appears to result from the Viet Cong lunar new year offensive. The shock and surprise of that onslaught resulted in a stirring of sharp criticism on both sides—U.S. and South Vietnamese.

The trend of the campaign is being pointed up by a columnist in the Saigon Daily News, one of the country's two English-language newspapers.

CITES ARTICLES

The column, called Slices of Life, is written under the pen name Van Minh. He cites a "series of virulent articles" in the paper Cong Chung.

The paper has asserted that the U.S. commitment in South Vietnam is intended to uphold the "interests and prestige of the United States rather than those of the people of Vietnam," Van Minh wrote.

Van Minh wrote that "the ing a series of columns under the general heading "U.S. Mistakes in Vietnam." The third one appeared Sunday. It was free of any of the white spaces that mark the hand of the government censor. The first two contained some deletions.

Van Minh himself now is writ- general feeling among most Americans here is that most Vietnamese are corrupt, undisciplined or irresponsible." He said he agreed that "this society which includes myself as well, is rotten beyond imagination," but added:

"What I wonder, however, is that whether the Vietnamese hold the monopoly of this rottenness, and whether our American 'advisers' are immune from such undesirable moral deficiencies."

Van Minh has been critical of dealings on the black market, rental practices, and what he called "complete disregard for the Vietnamese law" on the part of many Americans. He said the latter includes things ranging from traffic violations to encouraging Vietnamese children to run away from home.

Roderick McLeod, 36, of 3014 Craigowan, was fined $50 in central court Tuesday for causing a disturbance by being drunk at the Red Lion Motor Inn March 19.

The Danger of Rival Blocs

AS A STRONG SUPPORTER OF British entry into the European Common Market, The Economist of London is understandably cool toward the revival recently of an alternative North Atlantic Free Trade Area which would embrace Britain, the United States and Canada and a select group of other countries. But the influential weekly does not merely belittle the North Atlantic scheme, it marshals an impressive array of criticisms, both economic and political, which are of interest to this country as well as to Britain.

On the economic side, The Economist points out that NAFTA supporters in recently published studies have not only greatly exaggerated benefits to Britain by sticking to pre-devaluation figures but have also made the questionable assumption that all of the trade that would be diverted from the European Common Market would be won by Britain alone. To the argument that a North Atlantic Free Trade Association would spur investment in Britain by the United States, The Economist answers that on the contrary there would be no incentive for further investment in productive facilities since there would be no tariff barriers for American-produced goods to overcome. It is noted pointedly that Canada would suffer even more in this regard since there would be not even a geographic reason for increased American investment in this country to overcome shipping costs.

However, it is to the political aspect of the Atlantic trade scheme that The Economist directs its most trenchant criticism. This it sees as primarily an attempt to cut Britain off from Europe and it notes that the main sponsors — Mr. Douglas Jay, President of the Board of Trade in the former Conservative government, the Bank of London and South America, a "handful of MPs, economists and Anglo-Canadians" —have from the beginning been opposed to British membership in the European Common Market. "Though NAFTA supporters often enough maintain that their idea is not anti-European, it would be more honest to recognize that this is precisely its political dynamic," The Economist says.

"The core of the North Atlantic idea is an English-speaking club, an expanded white Commonwealth to which the European Free Trade Area countries could be admitted as honorary Englishmen, and the Japanese—well, the Japanese, one has to mention them to interest the Australians and New Zealanders and American exporters frustrated by extensive Japanese non-tariff barriers, but what NAFTA-ist would break his heart if they politely said no?"

The Economist speaks for what it believes is the long-term British interest, of course. The point of coincidence with the Canadian interest lies in whether it correctly interprets the political dynamic of the promoters of NAFTA. If, through the intransigence of President de Gaulle over British entry into the Common Market, the division of the non-Communist world into trading blocs is a possibility, in such an event, Canada cannot afford to be left out in the cold. This country must try to prevent, however, the erection of any new bloc which would be less than open-ended, which would widen the gulf between continental Europe and the North Atlantic countries and which would inhibit the growth of Canadian trade in the rapidly developing Pacific Rim and Latin America.

The Community's Asset

MAYOR HUGH STEPHEN'S proposal that the Regional District authority take over control of Thetis Lake Park, and become responsible for the costs of maintenance and development, is a sensible and workable solution to the financing problem presented by a city-owned park which is used by residents of the entire district. But any such arrangement should firmly guarantee the protection of the parkland from commercial intrusion, and preserve it against those who would whittle its size or harm its natural beauties.

Agreement by the Regional District would require amendment of its letters patent, which at present limit expenditures on parks maintenance to emergency measures. But this should arouse no objections in the case of Thetis Lake. The area — internationally known for its excellent displays of natural growth, and locally for its good swimming —is clearly a community-wide asset used by people not only from the city but also from the surrounding municipalities and territories. Those who benefit should contribute to the costs.

There was a time when Victoria properly assumed responsibility for the Thetis Lake recreational area. The city was the only local government with the resources to manage such an undertaking. But recent changes in population have altered that earlier situation. Today Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Saanich have a stake in the preservation of Thetis Lake Park and should be prepared to assume the responsibilities — through the Regional District authority—for its protection and improvement.

No Instant Solutions

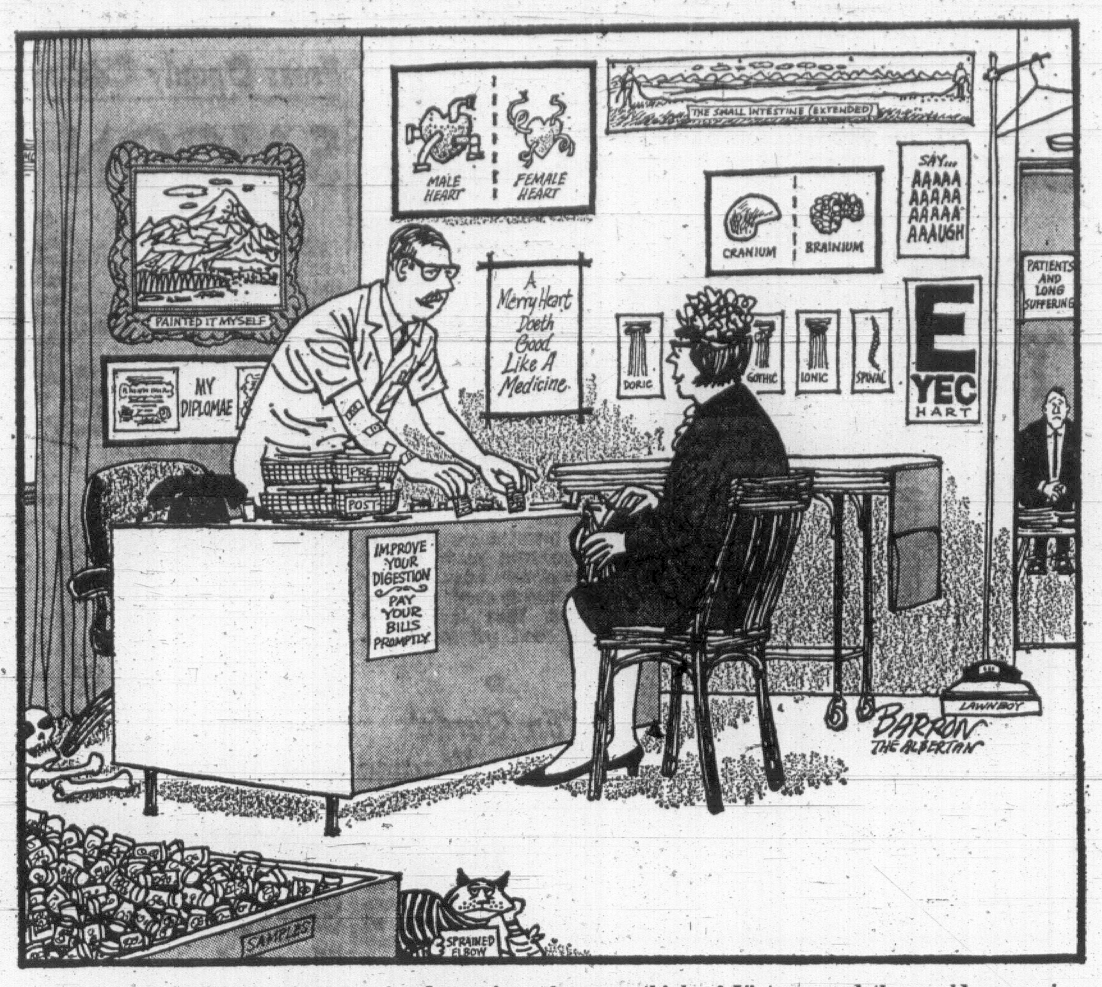

MR. WILBUR J. COHEN, whose career for the last 34 years has been closely identified with American social welfare legislation, and who was recently promoted to the post of secretary of health, welfare and education in the United States federal government, brings a pragmatist's approach to the problems of his department. He recognizes the new pressure brought to bear on governments by people who have developed a new-found interest in poverty and its influence on the nation as a whole.

"One of the big difficulties now," he points out, "is that everybody wants instant solutions to problems that have been in our society for thousands of years. I am glad that people are interested, but I think where we make our big mistake is for people to think that there are going to be instant solutions to these problems."

This is the reaction of a man who has immersed himself in various phases of welfare study—as a professor at the University of Michigan as well as in government office. He realizes that the essential changes to create the good society, let alone the great society, are not effected overnight. No one even cursorily interested in the field will challenge him on that point.

Unfortunately, however, the problems which have existed so long have now developed a pressure which will cause explosions if some means is not found of relieving them. The early start of this year's racial rioting is a case in point. And the build-up of defences against it, rather than antidotes for it, will not make the situation any easier.

Mr. Cohen recognizes the great mistakes that can be made if the process of improvement is hurried too much. At the same time he cannot be unaware of the horror that will occur if the under-privileged forces now in rebellion feel they are being offered too little, too late.

". . . all right now . . . these are for depression when you think of Vietnam and the world economic situation . . . these are to calm your elation over Trudeau and the early spring . . . . I've labelled them to avoid confusion . . . okay?"

FROM QUEBEC CITY — By STAN McDOWELL

Mr. Johnson Wary After Gabon Setback

THE end of the Liberal leadership convention will be the cue for the Quebec government to decide the next move, after Gabon, in its challenge to federal authority in international affairs. The nature of the move is expected to depend heavily on the nature of the man chosen at the convention as Canada's new prime minister. Quebec has already suffered one strategic setback this year as a result of miscalculating the temper of Prime Minister Pearson in the Gabon affair.

McDowell

And although there is little time left to decide Quebec's approach to the second session of the Gabon conference, to be held later this month in Paris, the province would be risking another setback if it decided on its next initiative without knowing who will be the prime minister to respond to it.

In international affairs as in other constitutional domains the Quebec government has been attempting to build itself a role based on concrete precedents, without waiting for constitutional negotiations with Ottawa and the other provinces.

Step by Step

This policy, if successful, would enable the province to acquire step by step the powers it wanted and make the formal constitutional "negotiations," when they came, simply a matter of ratifying an accomplished fact.

The whole constitutional policy of the Jean Lesage government was based on this approach. It explains Mr. Lesage's argument in 1965 that the time was not ripe for constitutional discussions. And it explains Premier Daniel Johnson's reluctance to commit himself to a firm position on a new constitution — for although the Johnson government talks a great deal about negotiating a new pact it has taken none of the steps necessary to prepare for it. The most striking evidence of this is Mr. Johnson's unwillingness, in almost two years in power, to call together the constitutional committee which was set up under the Lesage government at the urging of Mr. Johnson's own party.

This strategy of gain by precedent suffered a major setback in the Gabon affair. Quebec misjudged the attitude in the federal government. And, by appearing at an international conference as a sovereign state, it went farther than Ottawa could tolerate. The result was Canada's suspension of relations with Gabon, a precedent that undermined, rather than strengthened, Quebec's claim to an international role.

Quebec's belief that it could successfully get away with the Gabon venture is understandable. Before about 1966, Quebec could count on the federal government to bend a long way to avoid a collision. Ottawa was often in the position of having to yield to save its own face.

Lost Umbrella

A striking example was the sparring over the signing of agreements between Quebec and France in November, 1965. Even after Ottawa had signed an "umbrella agreement" with France, to which Quebec need only refer in signing its own agreement with the French government, the province went ahead and signed another entente without referring to the "umbrella agreement."

In the climate prevailing in Quebec and elsewhere in Canada at the time, Ottawa's only possible course was to go ahead and give its blessing to the Quebec venture. The surface was saved but the shrewdness of Quebec's strategy seemed confirmed.

The province's mistake, in the Gabon incident, was to assume that the federal government would continue indefinitely to be so accommodating in spite of the steady escalation of Quebec's diplomatic precedents.

After this assumption was proven wrong Premier Johnson complained, in a recent speech in the legislature, of the change in Ottawa's mood:

"Instead of running after us to cover us with its umbrella as it did in connection with the signing of the accords in 1965," he said, "Ottawa waited three weeks and then brought out the bludgeon."

Ottawa's "bludgeon," however, has now been seriously softened as a precedent as a result of cabinet division among Liberal leadership contenders.

Position Spelled Out

Both Prime Minister Pearson and Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau had spelled out the obvious implication of the break in relations with Gabon: that under similar circumstances Canada would take the same position toward France.

It was clear the real value of the precedent was as a deterrent. It gave Quebec and Paris advance warning not to push the situation to a point where Canada would be forced into a break with France. Such a break, however dangerous politically for the federal government, would also cause grave problems for Premier Johnson.

Since then, however, External Affairs Minister Paul Martin has taken the position that the importance of the affair has been vastly over-rated and that a break with France would be unthinkable. Other leadership candidates have not gone as far as Mr. Martin, but most have made more or less thinly veiled attacks on Mr. Trudeau's alleged "rigidity" on the issue and have laid great emphasis on their own "flexibility."

How seriously Premier Johnson intends to regard its deterrent value in deciding his approach to the Paris conference will not be known until the leadership convention is over. And it is expected to depend to an important extent on the convention's choice.

Mr. Johnson never lets his cards get far from his vest. Exactly how much he is reading into the constitutional "flexibility" promised by several leadership candidates is not certain. But promised flexibility of some candidates toward Quebec's constitutional aims is being interpreted very broadly on some of the province's more influential editorial pages. If these interpretations were not clarified, and if they were accepted in Quebec government circles as well, it would not be surprising if the statement that a break with France is unthinkable led Quebec into a gesture that made it almost inevitable.

Meanwhile it is evident that Quebec is concentrating its resources, in money and men, on international affairs as the key sector of its constitutional conflict with Ottawa.

Quebec's recent budget announced austerity at home but provided a substantial increase in funds for the department of inter-government affairs, as well as for the external relations sections of the departments of education and culture.

Nationalist Strategists

Also announced recently was the appointment of Guy Fregault, one of the most influential members of Quebec's senior civil service, to a key post in the department of inter-governmental affairs. Before he entered the civil service Mr. Fregault was one of the leading members of the "New Montreal School" of historians whose re-interpretation of Quebec's past provides the intellectual foundation of modern separatism.

As commissioner-general of external co-operation, Mr. Fregault will serve under deputy minister Claude Morin, another strongly nationalist intellectual who has been the leading constitutional strategist for the government of Jean Lesage and Daniel Johnson.

Supporting Bill 33

May I take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation for the truly amazing support and encouragement we have received from citizens in all walks of life and from all sections of the province who agree with the principles of the new labor legislation (Bill 33).

It has not been possible for me to answer personally all the letters I have received from those such as trade unionists, housewives, pensioners and the ordinary "man-on-the-street" who know they have most to lose from protracted labor-management disputes. These letters, and the many calls, are a sure indication that those who have been so vociferously opposing Bill 33 are out of tune with the thinking of the majority of residents of this province.—George C. Bradley, Chairman, The "Keep B.C. Prosperous Committee"

Looking Back

From the Times, April 3, 1908:

One of the questions the council must face in the near future is the handling of garbage. At present the council is experimenting by dumping it into the ocean and if the result is satisfactory this system may be followed in the next few years, although it is generally admitted in civic circles that sooner or later some other method must be adopted.

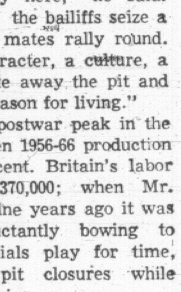

Council decided that the sum of $54,908 for the construction of an incinerator was inadequate.

King Coal Death Watch

By ALAN HARVEY

From Durham, England

OLD King Coal is changing his role, so British miners chase the dole. That's the nursery-rhyme rule of thumb in County Durham, where 5,000 men quit the pits every year. New technologies and ebbing demand dim the fires of an industry that fuelled the world's first industrial revolution. The miners in this corner of north-east England, a tough, true-blue and curiously undemanding lot, are watching the slow decay of their livelihood with dazed, uncomprehending regret.

Harvey

They are incredulous. For generations, sons followed fathers underground in an area where outcrop coal was found in Roman times never doubting their destiny, lying bare-torsoed in dirty water and 18-inch-passageways to bring out the black gold. Now it's ending. In the retreat from the steam age, pits across the country are closing. Talk about carrying coals to Newcastle is a sick joke.

"They can hardly believe it," said union official Larrie Scollen. "They grew up with coal; it was the only thing they knew."

Doomed as Mass Employer

That's the dilemma. Coal is doomed as a mass-employment industry, but there are few other jobs and the men won't move. Durham miners are solidly planted.

As in Scotland, as in the Rhondda Valley, a way of life fades.

"You have to be born into it to understand," said Will Paynter, general-secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers. He dug coal at 14. Technically he's a Communist, but is too gentle to rate high Marx in ideology.

"There's solidarity here," he said. "Roots go deep. When the bailiffs seize a man's furniture, his mates rally round. Coal has built a character, a culture, a mode of living. Take away the pit and you take away the reason for living."

Coal touched its postwar peak in the middle 1950s. Between 1956-66 production plummeted 20 per cent. Britain's labor force now totals 370,000; when Mr. Paynter took over nine years ago it was over 700,000. Reluctantly bowing to change, union officials play for time, seeking to slow pit closures while awaiting new industries.

Little Brooding

There is little sense of brooding tragedy in these closed-in, claustrophobic villages with their dingy stores, terraced houses and working men's social clubs. The mood is less anguished than during the inter-war depression years, when unemployed men huddled on street corners rather than hang about the house shamefully, their hands soft as women's. Unemployment grants totalling up to $2,000 cushion the first shock of idleness.

"The thing that stalks this country is uncertainty," said Mr. Scollen, seated at his desk in a Victorian building strewn with plaster statues, symbols of coal's grand epoch. "It can be a killing thing. People took it for granted that coal would always be there, filling your house with fine dust, maybe, but steady money for those willing to work."

NUM branch secretary John Burlison spoke of shock and catastrophe but added: "The days of emotionalism are over. As a nation, we face difficult times. This must be accepted."

What is remarkable is the responsible way the unions are co-operating with the board that runs the nationalized industry. This is the 21st anniversary of state ownership; in a sense, coal is mortally wounded just as it comes of age.

"It's a dying industry," said a miner, declining to give his name. "I'm young yet, I've got a chance. I've seen my marrer (mate) killed, buried under a fall. I'm glad it's over."

Slow Decay

Four years of research by Prof. John House of Newcastle University produced a two-word verdict: slow decay. "At this stage, I don't think hardship is widespread," he said. "But there is a great need for retraining facilities. The problem is starting to accelerate, and may become more serious in five or ten years."

Durham's resilience impressed him. "There is a work-and-play togetherness. Work is hard, difficulties are common, there is a shared sense of being underpriviliged." The middle class is more mobile. For those thinking of a new life, surveys show, Canada comes first, ahead of Australia or the United States. Professional classes are showing a strong interest in Canada in recent months, officials said. They will make good immigrants.

A livewire local official, Robert Edwardson, pleaded for Canadian investment. He extolled Durham's coastline, the proximity of Brandon to centres like Newcastle, Sunderland and Durham city, the beauties of the Northumberland Moors and the Cheviot Hills. A 185-acre industrial estate is close at hand, with a textile factory already in being and cash concessions awaiting all comers.

What the industry aims at is a smaller, stabilized force, producing set quantities at pre-determined prices. What it wants to avoid is the misery of a derelict site like Tow Law, 15 miles from Durham; empty shops, pub signs clanking in the wind, gutted windows like empty eye sockets. To be born into a mining village is to be born into the Labor party; miners and union officials hope "our own government" will keep Tow Laws to a minimum.

Forces Thinned By War

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON — The Vietnam war now claims more U.S. forces than are committed to all other foreign countries throughout the world.

The war's demands plus other overseas requirements combine to tie down over 1.1 million men.

The Vietnam effort takes about 598,000 in all; other American commitments abroad involve over 566,500.

One result: The amount of active duty manpower the United States could dispatch to emergency troublespots in out-of-the-way areas has dwindled considerably in recent months.

Strategic Reserve is a broad term embracing the active duty forces at home which could be ordered out to meet unexpected military emergencies in other areas.

Military men have generally thought of five divisions as the minimum size force for the Strategic Reserve role.

Today, as a result of latest troop commitments to Vietnam, the Strategic Reserve is down to four divisions, although the equivalent of a fifth is available.

The Southeast Asia conflict involves 510,000 troops in South Vietnam itself; 43,000 in Thailand from where more than half the air strikes against North Vietnam originate; 10,000 in Guam where some of the B52s still operate; and 35,000 in naval units stationed off the Vietnam coast.

Compared with this 598,000 total there are over 566,500 U.S. military personnel in some 20 other foreign countries with whom the United States has agreements.

Europe claims most with 352,000 U.S. servicemen, including 257,000 in West Germany.

Other countries with American contingents: England 25,000; Spain 10,000, (both England and Spain fall under the European total). Japan 40,000; Korea 55,000; Okinawa 45,000; Philippines 25,000; Latin America 40,000; Canada 3,000; Bermuda 2,000; Greenland 1,500; Iceland 3,000 and the Middle East and Africa 10,000.

Other unspecified numbers of U.S. troops are located in Portugal, Cuba, Greece, Italy, Libya, Taiwan and Turkey.

Major military units now remaining in the United States contain about 80,000 men, although thousands of others are assigned to lesser artillery, engineer, ordnance and signal units throughout the county.

In addition to the 80,000 there are about 235,000 men undergoing basic and advanced individual training at the various U.S. training bases.

Czechs Hear First Detailed Story Of Excesses of Stalinist Period

By ANATOLE SHUB
The Washington Post

PRAGUE — Czechoslovakia has received the first detailed personal account by a principal defendant of the Stalinist trials of the 1950s.

The account came in the form of an interview with 63-year-old Richard Slansky, brother of the late Rudolf Slansky, former general secretary of the Communist party who was executed on charges of Titoist-Zionist-imperialist conspiracy in 1953.

Richard Slansky was imprisoned for seven years and then rearrested on the personal initiative of former president Antonin Novotny.

The Slansky interview, which appeared in the youth newspaper Mlada Fronta, presents a picture of torture and brutality such as has never before appeared in this country. Its publication indicates the determination of the leaders of Czechoslovakia's peaceful "March revolution" to proceed with the full "de-Stalinization" which Novotny and others had blocked in Czechoslovakia since 1956.

The Slansky trials have a peculiar political relevance today, because the defendants were charged with complicity in an alleged plot involving Israel, Zionist groups, Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia and American intelligence agencies.

Same Themes

Although after Stalin's death the Soviet Union and other Communist countries resumed relations with Israel, and normalized relations with Yugoslavia, the themes of 1951-53 have been recurring more recently — with strong anti-Israel and anti-Zionist campaigns in Poland and elsewhere, and distinctly cool relations with Yugoslavia.

Neither the Czechoslovak public nor the new party leadership appears at all sympathetic to the revival of such approaches.

On the night of Nov. 23-24, 1951, Slansky recounts, a half dozen plainclothesmen with revolvers entered his apartment, bound and blindfolded him, and took him by car to a political prison at Ruzyne, near Prague's main airport.

"They put a garbage pail over my head and said I was a traitor, a spy and a member of a subversive centre. For a while I thought there had been a fascist coup d'etat."

Like Hitler

The chief Ruzyne interrogator wore high boots and reminded Slansky of Hitler. At the very first interrogation, he said: "We'll finish you all off." The interrogation lasted a year and a half, and Slansky served another five and a half years in Leopoldov prison. "But even after we were freed, we were still under control of the ministry of the interior."

During the first month of the interrogation, Slansky lost 40 pounds. "Every day the interrogator would poke a sharp pencil into my forehead to see how much fat had been lost." The defendants were not allowed to sleep, were forced to stand all the time and were subjected to incessant interrogation.

"Can you imagine," Slansky said, "what it is not to sleep for five or six nights, to have to walk up and down the cell without being allowed to sit, to be hungry with a fever, almost in delirium after nights spent in a freezing cell with wide open windows — and then to be dragged to the interrogators constantly to discuss one's 'guilt' . . .

"I had to stand tied to the wall while the interrogators took turns. The last shift started around midnight. I think Dante must have seen some medieval trails to write the Inferno."

When it came to signing a confession, Slansky said, he was so weak that "I was incapable even of holding a pen. The interrogator sat down next to me, took my hand in his and guided it. Later on there were times when I was ready to sign anything, just to have peace and quiet, even if it were death."

Slansky described how the defendants were taught to memorize the protocol, or trial scenario. "For several weeks, they gave me the protocols with the questions and answers and locked me in the cell. I had better food and was examined daily by the interrrogator. I had to recite it word for word without a single change. Toward the end, the chairman of the court and the prosecutor both came to make sure that I knew it by heart. And then they decided on the date of the trial."

Death Penalty

Slansky was sentenced first to death, then to life imprisonment. then to 25 years' imprisonment. But post-Stalin amnesties in 1953 and 1955, and a supreme court decision in July, 1958, revising the trials, reduced the effective sentence to 5½ years.

Nevertheless, although Slansky was due to be freed on May 21, 1957, he remained in prison 465 days longer — to July 15, 1958. When he was released and returned to Prague, however, he was again arrested and imprisoned for another 42 days with no reason given him.

"My wife," Slansky said, "who was ill and expecting me, had a nervous breakdown when she found out about my new arrest. Nobody had told her why I had been arrested or where I was."

Official Letter

Slansky disclosed that, despite many protests and inquiries at the justice ministries since 1958, it was "only in the last few days" that he had learned why and how he had been rearrested. President Novotny, in official letter number 1912-205-58, had asked the ministry of justice for a report "on why and under what circumstances they had agreed to the unjustified release of Richard Slansky."

Slansky said he was not interested in revenge against the people who had prepared and abetted the Stalinist trials, and would not testify against them. But he emphasized that the Czechoslovak public should know who was responsible and how, and that such people "should not have the honor of participating in regional party conferences." He said he did not wish them the sort of fate they had prepared for him, but that they had no business in public life.

How Will a New PM Select His Cabinet?

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA—A big man in the Hellyer camp was leaning casually against a corridor wall in the Chateau Laurier and saying: "Look, we have three kinds of friends: those who joined us before the convention, those who are joining us now; and those who'll join us after we win."

The comment which could be the credo of any of the leading candidates, is an elementary lesson in the small arts of machine politics. Obviously, the earlier you hop on the bandwagon, the better seat you have on it as it rolls past the victory line.

Newman

When a party is not in power, all that's involved is promises for the future or easier access to the leader. But in this case, with the Liberals sure to begin the formation of a new government next week, it could mean anything from a postmaster's job in rural Saskatchewan to a seat at the Privy Council table.

Who owes what to whom on Saturday night, at the end of the voting, could be translated into who'll get what from whom on Monday morning, or more seriously, what kind of government will Canada have when the ballyhoo is over.

In choosing his ministers, the new leader will be constrained by the fact that he is inheriting a 25-member cabinet from his predecessor. Few ministers can be fired on the spot.

Because of his minority parliamentary position, the new P.M will not want to hazard many more than the four by-elections he is already facing on June 17.

At least one minister—Jack Nicholson— may be willing to follow the example of Walter Gordon and retain his seat while resigning from the cabinet. This may also be true of Robert Winters if he doesn't win.

Five other ministers are known to be pushing for early retirement from active politics. (Larry Pennell and Judy LaMarsh want appointments to the bench; Roger Teillet, Hedard Robichard and Arthur Laing would like to go to the Senate. There are seven senate vacancies—one each in Alberta, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland and two in British Columbia.)

These eight departures would help but they wouldn't by themselves give the government a brand new look.

Because the new leader will want to dramatically dissociate his administration from the motley crew that sat round the Privy Council chamber under Lester Pearson, his main ploy will be to reshuffle the various portfolios, particularly the senior jobs.

The candidate who has given his supporters the least definite pledges is Pierre Trudeau, the most likely winner. Even Jean Marchand, E. J. Benson and Bryce Mackassey, the ministers managing his campaign, have been given no specific promises though there is little doubt they would be given cabinet promotion.

The outlines of a Trudeau cabinet are still vague but he has told some of his senior advisors that he plans to shuffle those ministers who want to stay, rather than revamping the entire cabinet if he wins.

Because he still feels an outsider in the Liberal party, Trudeau believes he must not just win office (by getting the leadership) but also win power (by going to the country and getting a majority mandate) before he can

That's why if Trudeau gets the leadership, he will probably shuffle the cabinet, bring down an imaginative speech from the throne, then demand a popular mandate in an end-of-June election.

Some of the Trudeau advisors have mentioned the possibility of calling Walter Gordon back into the cabinet but it's clear whether this reflects Trudeau's own thinking, or if it's merely a manoeuvre by his handlers to attract second choice support from those former Gordon loyalists who are now Hellyer backers.

Marchand is being mentioned as a possible secretary of state for external affairs. John Turner has been mooted as possible minister of justice, partly because he's strong in B.C. and there are men in the Trudeau group who are convinced that it will be British Columbia, not Quebec, that will delay the revamping of the BNA Act.

Other Trudeau supporters who might expect cabinet

JOHN TURNER

posts though probably not until after the next election, are Toronto MPs James Walker, Robert Stanbury and Don Macdonald, Liberal caucus chairman Russell Honey and Quebec MPs Gerard Pelletier and Jean-Pierre Goyer.

If Paul Martin becomes the new prime minister, his main task will be to keep too many cabinet ministers from resigning. He is the one candidate many of the current members of cabinet would prefer not to serve under. The only minister supporting his candidacy is Maurice Suave.

A Paul Hellyer cabinet would probably include Ontario MPs Robert Andras, Hellyer's campaign manager, and Dr. Harry Harley, as well as Grant Deachman from B.C. Paul Hellyer and Mitchell Sharp are the two candidates who would maintain the loyalties of most of the present cabinet members.

One problem facing the new prime minister—unless by some wild chance his initials happen to be EK—will be what to do about Eric Kierans.

If the Liberal leadership campaign produced a hero, it has to be Kierans. In his whirlwing three-month campaign he has had a tremendous impact on the federal Liberal party, greatly impressing a majority of the 1,800 delegates he's met personally.

If there were a vote next Saturday on whether Kierans should have a senior position in the Liberal cabinet, there's little doubt that the delegates would endorse him overwhelmingly on the first ballot. This is a sentiment no new leader can afford to ignore.

Kierans would not only bring personal integrity, courage and bold ideas into the Liberal administration but the pervasive political excitement the new government will badly need.

'A Child Shall Lead Them'— But We'd Better Look Where

By ART STOTT

One of the nicest things that can happen to an April Fool joke, in my opinion, is to have it backfire. That, I take it, is what happened to the bright little elves of Oak Bay Junior High who participated in an organized walk-out on the morning of the first of the month.

Stott

As I read the stories, they have written, at Principal Peter Boldt's dictation, a letter explaining their miscalculations and will make up the missing time in detentions. No hard feelings, but for mistakes you pay a penalty of sorts.

One incident in the carefree demonstration by the youngsters seems to serve a valuable purpose. Some of them trekked to the school board office and set up the chant: "We want classrooms."

As Mr. Boldt has pointed out, they went to the wrong place at the wrong time to say the wrong thing. The school trustees have been working like mad to have more classrooms provided. They didn't need a chant from the sopranos to convince them of their need.

The value in the demonstration rests on its classic illustration of the hazards of immaturity. Some of them at least lacked experience and knowledge to give point to the case they were trying to make—and some obviously didn't understand the case, either.

Times without end we are reminded these days that half or more of our Canadian population is under 25 years old. So, argue some, we must give more attention to the wants, the aspirations and the ideals of the young. Basically I think that argument has merit. But there are one or two points in it which need elaboration.

If the under-25s are equally divided in age—then about 20 per cent of them would be preschool—small children ranging from babyhood to kindergarten who are to all intents and purposes illiterate. Coupled with their older brothers and sisters extending to Grade 8, they represent about half the total of under-25s. The pupils of Grade 8 or lower, it seems to me, are scarcely in a position to run the affairs of a highly complex world.

By very rough arithmetic, that leaves half of the under-25s in the age range from secondary school to university graduation or young employment.

At the lower end of this group, a batch ran away from Oak Bay junior high this week to chant a message to a school board which is making supreme efforts to achieve what the youngsters chanted and requires no direction from them. At the higher end we have an age grouping which includes such earnest young people as the Victoria Youth Council. Only last year the youth council propounded the idea that it should have voting representation on the city council and the school board without bothering to qualify as candidates for municipal office or being elected by the people who pay the bills.

So when we're told how urgent it is to listen to the voice of youth—and I believe it is urgent—we should be a little selective. We should ask: "Which youth—the ones who run out of junior high and make April Fools of themselves outside the school board office, the earnest and altruistically inclinded, if somewhat unworldly, youth councillors who ignore the responsibilities which go with elective office, or, perhaps, the bulk of very sound young people who are busy getting an education and learning to accept obligations placed upon them?"

As older people, we have a certain right to shop around and see what kind of ideas we'll buy from the youth market. As younsters, they have a right to shop around and decide what they'll buy from the philosophy and tradition of their elders.

And there's another way to look at this obsessive interest in youth and to what degree the adult should modify his attitudes and practices to meet the demands of the young. If more than half are under 25 years of age in our Canadian population, just about half are over that age—endowed with the selfishness and conservativism of advancing years. They have a substantial interest in looking after themselves. The point is interesting, because youngsters five years under 25 now will be over 25 in 1973. At that stage, on the assumption that most of them will recognize themselves as taxpayers, their attitudes may change, may become a little less altruistic. They may even be saying "I want" to match the "I want" of the young. It's distressing to contemplate this change, but it happens.

In the meantime, let's offer thanks to Oak Bay's junior high demonstators for the honest laughter they have given us by a joke that went into reverse on Fool's Day.

THE ANGRY YOUNG WORLD

Militant Dutch Students Boost Power Potential

By SUE MASTERMAN

(This is the second in a series on the challenges being posed by young people, particularly organized student groups, in many parts of the world.)

AMSTERDAM — The potential power of Dutch students is great. They use it rarely, but when they do things begin to move quickly.

The Dutch Ministry of Justice is changing legislation to make it illegal in Holland to be insulting about the head of a "friendly country." The change is happening only because the Dutch students have forced the ministry's hands.

The old law made it an offence to insult the President of the United States, but when the students upheld their right to express their opinion of Lyndon Johnson and of his policy in Vietnam and thousands of them joined in the protest, the attempt by the police to enforce the law made the Ministry of Justice look ridiculous.

Dutch students have a high place in society, partly they come from the better class homes, tend to avoid extremism, and to work hard to gain the paper qualifications which are an essential part of the Dutchman's status quotient.

Much to Lose

Only 8 per cent of Dutch students come from working class homes. The long period of study which they undertake — between five and seven years — means that the average student is relatively mature, and has too much to lose if he takes up his time with demonstrations and student politics. Among women students there is a very high drop-out rated. Seventy-five per cent never finish their studies.

A group of students from Amsterdam has been granted broadcasting time by the Dutch government, together with substantial financial backing to set up a radio and television university. The initiative came from the students, not from their professors.

At the University of Utrecht an experiment is under way. A group of students are studying their professors' lecturing techniques and marking them accordingly. The government also listens seriously to the National student Committee's complaints and advice on students' grants, and is about to bring in new legislation.

But the quiet period may be reaching its end. In the elections earlier this month for the National Student Committee the left-wing student group Vakverbond appears to have won a majority. Their policy is much more militant and starts by rejecting the whole of the government's education program. It remains to be seen whether they can use their power without destroying their influence.

In Belgium the students are powerful enough to bring down the government, as they did last month on the emotional issue of the University of Leuven (Louvain). Leuven is an ancient Roman Catholic university in what is now the Flemish language sector of Belgium. The Flemings insist that its French language department, which has about 8,000 of the 20,000 students, should move to a new university in the French language sector. When the French professors refused the Flemish students began a movement which eventually led to the splitting and fall of the government.

The election at the weekend was fought on this question and the larger issue of the splitting of Belgium into two separately governed zones. Whether the separation is gradual or violent depends for a great deal on the students who act as barometer for the collective emotions of the country in which they live.

Quebec MLA Wary of Trudeau

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP) — Pierre Laporte, Liberal whip in the Quebec legislature, says Justice Minister Trudeau represents for English Canada "the preserver who will bring an end to the more and more exacting demands of Quebec."

This attitude is deplorable and risks national unity, he said Monday in commenting in an interview on the Liberal leadership race.

If the attitude of the next federal Liberal leader is rigid toward Quebec, he said, it will be a catastrophe.

The choice of Mr. Trudeau will be disturbing, not because he has shown any intention of humbling Quebec, but because English Canada attributes this intention to him.

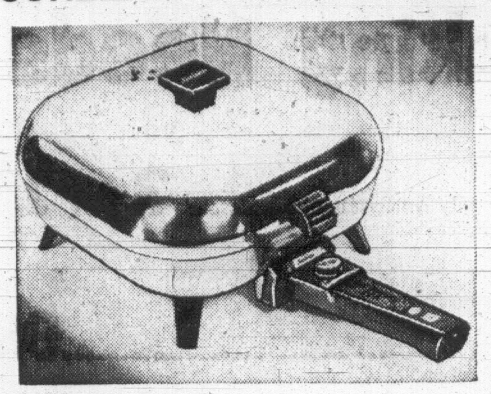

Mr. Laporte said the next Canadian prime minister should be capable of making English-Canadians understand the importance of Quebec in Canada.

Only Formal Approval Needed for Bill 33

By JOHN MIKA

The legislative mill began grinding bills through at a faster pace Tuesday as MLAs sniffed prorogation in the cherry blossom-scented breezes outside.

They adjourned at midnight after completing clause-by-clause debate of the 83-section Bill 33 and approving 18 other bills in principle by giving them second reading.

The MLAs covered 44 sections of the bill in an hour, capping 23 hours of argument through second reading and committee study after having spent six hours the previous night on the most contentious sections.

The bill still has to jump the third reading hurdle, normally a formality. It will become law upon proclamation by the government.

DEFEATED

Two NDP amendments aimed at extending collective bargaining to civil servants and some professional employees, repeating previous efforts, were defeated quickly.

But a hot battle broke out over Section 51 which establishes maximum fines of $1,000 for individuals or $10,000 for organizations convicted of violating the legislation's provisions including cabinet decrees outlawing a strike or lockout.

The section also adds a maximum $150 a day to the fines for each day the offence continues beyond the conviction.

Randolph Harding (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) said the fines would be used as a club against workers but "force cannot and will not work in 1968."

"I know some (employers) who, if I were working for them, I would strike against no matter if I had to go to jail," he said.

Similar sentiments were expressed by opposition members but the government majority easily approved the section wher it overwhelmed the combined NDP and Liberals in the house 28 to 19 on a formal division.

Prior to the division on Section 51 Mr. Peterson pointed out that the $1,00 fines for individuals defying the statute were maximum figures and that the courts could establish reasonable fines in specific cases.

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) had described the heavy fines as "barbaric" and "the use of the whip instead of common sense."

An amendment to the section by Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) to ban ex parte injunctions in labor disputes was ruled out of order by committee chairman Herb Bruch because it was beyond the scope of the section.

Driver Unhurt

A car went out of control Tuesday and flipped over, landing on its roof on a Blanshard St. boulevard.

Police said the car driven north on Douglas by Dennis Cofield, 1514 Gladstone, skidded 185 feet as it attempted to turn on to Blanshard.

The car landed on its roof on the east side boulevard 20 feet south of Heywood.

'Attempting to Split Native Unity'

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP)—A meeting of 70 Indian chiefs, councillors and band delegates Tuesday accused two prominent Indian leaders of trying to split native unity.

The meeting was critical of Frank Calder, New Democratic Party MLA for Atlin, and Guy Williams, president of the Native Brotherhood, and their part in forming a group called the Big Five.

The Indian leaders broke away from the Confederation of British Columbia Indians and formed their own group because they said the confederation cannot speak for Indians on the land question.

The Big Five and the confederation both are seeking to represent B.C. Indians' claims for compensation for land taken from them.

"Every chief and band councillor in B.C. should be heard by the land commission," said Chief Phillip Paul, confederation chairman.

"And they should be allowed to elect leaders who will not manipulate them to serve their own ends.

"The elected leaders should have the utmost confidence of their people and should not commit themselves to any political party. At the present time, we are victims of politicians."

Mrs. Gertrude Guerin of the Musqueam band criticized the Big Five for conducting their business in secret meetings.

Peter Scow, representing his father, Chief William Scow of Alert Bay, a former president of the Native Brotherhood, submitted a statement condemning what he called the undemocratic actions of the Big Five.

. . . MARKETING LAWS

10 meetings had produced "information sufficient to indicate the need for legislation to:

- Ensure there will be no return to "Consignment selling" by oil companies to captive service stations in order to protect "the free force of competition in the industry";
- Force the oil companies to establish "two distinct markets" of brand name and non-brand products with equal treatment to retailers within both market groupings;
- Create a statutory wholesale differential of "not less than three cents" a gallon gasoline;
- And prohibit "the type of advertising known as gifts, gimmicks and giveaways" because of their similarity to outlawed trading stamps.

AGAINST PROPOSALS

The report is expected to draw severe fire from the oil industry because several companies filed briefs with the committee opposing any regulation of marketing practices.

The committee's report represented a reversal of its position last session when Mr. Capozzi presented a controversial report, saying no legislation was needed to follow up the recommdndations.

The 1967 report was presented on the eve of prorogation and the government forestalled an attempt by Mr. Shelford to start debate.

This time Mr. Capozzi voted with the government against his own motion to adopt the report without notice.

But he had been forced by the Socred split in the committee to make both the report and the request for adoption, on a vote of eight to five.

Mr. Shelford, Hunter Vogel (SC — Langley) and Willis Jeffcoat (SC—Shuswap) were believed to be the ones who joined the four NDP and one Liberal on the committee who favored the report.

Mr. Shelford, who has crusaded four years for regulation of gasoline prices to bring them lower in the northern areas, later said he hoped for but did not expect the government to implement the report this session.

"But they certainly should next session and I expect legislation then," he said.

TWO PRICES

Mr. Shelford said the two-price guarantee would enable indepents to establish service stations in the north and the statutory three-cent differential would bring the current 49-cents-per-gallon price for regular gas down to 46 cents.

He said the oil companies now enjoy a "closed industry" which allows them to freeze out independent retailers by not supplying them with gasoline.

Mr. Shelford said that if legislation doesn't achieve the desired result stronger measures should be taken.

He suggested the Red Star Oil Company owned by the government which now purchases gas and oil products for B.C. Hydro and other public agencies could be used to supply independents if they are not given a fair deal by the oil companies.

Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark, who presented a brief to the commcttee which indicated he felt a two-price system was feasible, said he did not know whether legislation would follow the report.

Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East, a member of the committee, said his party's proposal to set up a crown corporation could "break the market" to ensure that independents were supplied at the wholesale level.

She spent all of her life on the Bella Bella Indian reserve. She had 92 living offspring, including a son who is 78 and a daughter 72

Delegates to Discuss Other Ethnic Groups

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP has arranged a special caucus of Liberal convention delegates who are of neither French nor English extraction to discuss the question of special status for any group in Canada.

Steve Otto (York East) told a news conference Tuesday he has won approval of convention organizers to hold the caucus Thursday in the Coliseum, next door to the civic centre site of the convention.

He said he has obtained the names of about 250 delegates with "ethnic" names and expects 120-130 to respond to his caucus cal. He is sending them this dear-delegate letter:

DESTINY ISSUE

"Of paramount importance to us is the issue of our national destiny. Shall we be one nation or two? Shall any group of Canadians be granted special status, and if so, what shall be the quality of that privilege?

"Many of us are of the opinion that this vital question begs a clear stand from this convention and therefore, since your views on this are very important, I would be honored if you could attend a special meeting in this regard, to take part in our deliberations."

CANDIDATES WELCOME

Otto told reporters none of the leadership candidates will be invited to the caucus. However they or their representatives are welcome to attend "as observers."

He had personally questioned the "concept of two nations, special status" and in recent months had addressed ethnic organizations across Canada and sought their views.

Firms Fined For Breaking Combines Act

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Vancouver firms Tuesday were fined a total of $20,000 for violating the combines act on shipments to eastern Canada.

Overland Import Agencies Ltd. (Leimar Forwarding Company) was fined $10,000. J. W. Mills and Sons Ltd. and Kuehne and Nagel (Canada) Ltd. were fined $5,000 each in exchequer court.

Two firms acquitted were Denning Freight Forwarders Ltd. and Johnston Terminals Ltd. Mr. Justice H. F. Gibson of Ottawa presided.

Charges covered the period between Jan. 1, 1956, and Aug. 1, 1966, and alleged that the accused unlawfully conspired to unduly limit facilities for transporting or dealing in articles imported from the Orient and forwarded to eastern Canada by railway pool car.

Mr. Justice Gibson said Denning entered the business after Leimar and Mills and began to cut into business of the other two firms to such an extent they agreed to institute a rate war which forced Denning out of business.

How did the Canadians capture Western Airlines without a struggle?

It was planned that way.

Six years before Western began to fly into Vancouver, we sent John Lee to your city as District Sales Manager.

John fell in love with British Columbia and its people.

Later, Canadian Ken Scott, who had been with Western Airlines for 17 years, was appointed our Vancouver Station Manager.

Last year, these men hired a group of friendly, efficient, talented Canadians. To form the nucleus of a team that would serve all of Western Canada out of greater Vancouver.

They are serving now.

And now Western offers daily nonstop jet service from Vancouver to Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland. Plus through-jet flights to Las Vegas, San Diego and Phoenix.

They're all friendly. All efficient. All talented. And all Canadian.

Rent Squeeze Frightening

By AB KENT
Business Editor

For many people, especially the old age pensioner struggling to retain a semblance of independence, the rent squeeze is a frightening thing.

When bread, milk and cigarettes go up, it is always possible to eat or smoke less; electricity rates may rise and the householder can try to use less power; bus fares can be hiked—people can walk more often or go out less often.

Kent

These things amount to a few cents at a time and can be absorbed with a lot of grumbling and a little discipline.

But when the rent is suddenly jumped $5 to $15 in a single month, how do you make it up if you earn only $70 a week—that's $3,600 a year—or $100 a month from a pension

People who rent their accommodation have been facing a continual escalation of rates in Greater Victoria for at least four years.

In the past 12 months, private and commercial landlords have added from 5 per cent to $15 a month to apartment and house rentals.

They say it is because of higher local taxes, rising maintenance costs and wages for plumbers, painters, electricians and carpenters.

If taxes go up again this month, renters can expect a further burden to bear.

Some unfortunate people have moved two and three times in the last two years, chased by rising rents.

For some, such as one elderly lady and her companion, getting cheaper living quarters has meant moving away from the downtown, or established residential areas to set up housekeeping in the Lakehill suburbs, where transportation becomes an added cost.

For others, the rent problem has meant shifting from place to place in the community seeking the best deal for the same money.

A secretary complained she had to leave the house where she was happily established in Cedar Hill—and the landlord was sorry to see her go, but he still raised the rent.

By dint of thorough searching, and some luck, she found another place in South Fairfield where she and her husband will not have all the amenities they enjoyed before but will still be able to afford their apartment.

★ ★ ★

Some landlords apparently feel apprehension that rent controls will be imposed, after hearing some such loose talk in the legislature. The professional property managers harbor no such fears, however.

Any rent increases are based solely on economics—including a 10-15 per cent profit margin they say, rather than anticipation of a rent freeze.

Here are some rent comparisons:

Anyone who pays less than $90 a month for an unfurnished apartment is practically in a class by himself. That is the general starting price for bachelor digs.

For one bedroom, the price goes up to between $115 and $135 and for luxury accommodation—like a new high-rise—tenants can expect to pay at least $200 and as much as $350. (A very few penthouse apartments command not only a grand view but an impressive $700 a month.)

Houses are in a slightly different—though just as expensive—category and have seen increases in the nature of 10 per cent in the past year. Good rental houses are hard to find.

A house in first-class condition with automatic furnace, electric stove, washer and refrigerator will bring $175 a month, depending on the district In Oak Bay or Cadboro Bay the rent could easily be $275, one agent said.

Aside from those two favored neighborhoods this agent had been asked to find a four-bedroom house for which a mother was offering to pay $200 a month.

In order to afford it, her income should be at least $800 a month, which few ordinary persons could claim.

But what can be done to stabilize rents for poorer people? The problem is getting some consideration in Victoria and Saanich, however, slowly grind the wheels.

A suggestion that local or provincial government could take up will be discussed here Thursday.

Vancouver Island life insurance men will hold a sales congress Thursday in Empress Hotel Georgian Lounge, where they will hear presentations by successful agents.

FIRST PRE-DESIGNED unit train completed its maiden run last week, carrying iron pellets from Ontario's newest mine. Railway, steel company, mine and government officials marked arrival of the stubby Canadian National and Ontario Northlands cars from Temagemi, 340 miles to north, at Hamilton, with a trackside ceremony. There are three train sets. They will run continuously on 72-hour cycles between an automatic loading dock at the Sherman mine and an elevated railway line over blast furnace bins at steel plant in Hamilton.

Record Car Sales Eyed

DETROIT, Mich. (WP) — The U.S. auto industry, still hoping for a record or near-record year, sold 2,021,520 cars in the first three months of 1968—well above the 1,743,646 sold in the January-March period of 1967 and third best first quarter in history.

March sales were also the third best ever for that month. The total was 746,581 cars up from 670,391 in March 1967.

Bolstered by the March performance, auto executives are predicting a big sales spurt in April. With import sales running at record level, the executives predict over-all sale of 9 million to 9.3 million cars in 1968—close to or equaling the all-time high of 9.3 million sales in 1965.

General Motors recorded first-quarter sales of 1,008,475, its third best first-quarter performance and 13 per cent above the 891,881 cars sold a year ago. March sales were 390,678, up 17 per cent on a daily rate from the 345,679 sold a year ago.

Ford Motor Co., on the road to recovering from the effects of the two-month strike last fall sold 574,244 cars in the first quarter up from 495,182 a year ago. March deliveries reached 207,171 up 13 per cent from the 183,888 sold last year.

GM's Chevrolet division edged Ford for industry leadership in the first quarter. Chevy sold 467,854 cars compared with 467,171 for Ford. In March Chevy outsold Ford, 179,985 to 169,680.

Chrysler Corp. recorded record first-quarter sales of 374,675, up from 303,932 last year and the previous first-quarter high of 336,925 set in 1966. Sales in March totaled 143,750, up 20 per cent from the 119,613 sold last year and the second highest total for any month in history.

American Motors sold 64,126 cars in the first quarter up from 52,651 a year ago. The company delivered 25,982 cars last month, up from 21,211 in March 1967. It marked the sixth straight month that sales topped the previous period a year ago.

White Pass Profits Increase

VANCOUVER (CP) — Profits of White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd. rose to $1,351,851 or $1.72 a share in 1967, the company said in its annual report Tuesday.

The 1966 figures were $969,827 or $1.28 a share.

President Frank H Brown's report also gave details of a shipping agreement reached with Anvil Mining Corp. covering movement of Anvil's lead and zinc concentrates from the Yukon mine site to Skagway, Alaska.

White Pass undertakes for eight years to move about 370,000 tons a year of lead and zinc from Vangorda Creek by truck to Whitehorse and then by rail to a new bulk-handling wharf to be built by White Pass at Skagway. The Skagway facilities will permit loading of 35,000-ton ships.

New Housing Starts Show Healthy Gain

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction started on 6,591 new houses and apartments in the principal urban parts of Canada in February, a gain of nearly 80 per cent from a year earlier, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has reported.

This represented an annual rate of construction starts, on a seasonally adjusted basis, of 215,900, well above the number needed to meet current demand. The annual rate established in January this year was 183,200.

The Crown-owned housing agency said all types of dwellings shared in the February increase, but the greatest gain was made in starts on new apartments, up 102.2 per cent.

The February housing starts brought the total for the first two months of the year to 14,282 in urban centres of 10,000 population and more. This was 56 per cent more than in the first two months of last year, and all provinces but Nova Scotia shared in the increase.

Constant Use of Pills Creates Varied Problems

TORONTO (CP) — A team of Montreal medical researchers reports that more Canadians may be addicted to headache pills than to any other drug.

Dr. Henry Gault and Dr. T. Christopher Rudwall of Queen Mary Veteran's Hospital say in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal:

"The extent of habituation to analgesics may be exceeded only by that of habituation to nicotine and alcohol."

They studied 500 hospital veterans and found that 32 took excessive quantities, an average of five or more tablets daily for at least three years.

Headache was the reason given by 18 and arthritis by seven.

The doctors said of the 183 patients who took headache tablets three times a week or more, 110 took a combination pill which contains acetylsalicyclic acid, phenacetin, caffeine citrate and codeine.

They said there is evidence these combination pills taken in excess can lead to anemia, peptic ulcers and stomach bleeding.

The doctors said use of the simple acetylsalicylic acid tablets was "seldom abused" compared with the mixed analgescis and blamed in part the codeine in the mixed tablets.

Billy Butlin Retires

LONDON (CP)—Sir Billy Butlin, who rose from being a Toronto office boy to control of a holiday-camp empire in Britain, announced his retirement Monday. Butlin handed over chairmanship of his $73,000,000 firm to his 32-year-old son Robert.

Killed in Slide

NEWPORT (AP)—An Oregon State University professor and his son died Saturday in a rock and dirt slide at nearby Agate Beach. David Tilles, 34, and his son, Ralph Benjamin Tilles, 4, were climbing an overhanging cliff when the ground above them gave way.

ASIANS ARE TO BLAME FOR MASS POVERTY

NEW YORK (AP)—The peoples of South Asia are not "emerging" but are stuck fast in a wretched mass poverty that must be blamed on the Asians themselves, says a world famous economist, Gunnar Myrdal of Sweden.

ON EVE OF STANLEY CUP PLAYOFFS...

...HAWKS' MIKITA GOES FOR CHECKUP

Even Slightest Cough May Cause a Coach to Faint

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As always, the injured list takes on increasing importance as eight National Hockey League teams prepare for Thursday's start of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

League scoring leader Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks went to hospital for a checkup Tuesday, but the Hawks' team physician said his ailment is not serious—a bad back and a cold.

"As far as I can tell, he'll be able to play Thursday night," said Dr. Myron Tremaine.

Bobby Hull, Mikita's illustrious team-mate, who sat out the last three games of the regular season because of a broken nose and a bruised instep, reported: "The foot doesn't seem to be getting better, but I'll be ready for the Rangers."

With the Black Hawks meeting the Rangers in New York in one best-of-seven series, Boston Bruins will meet the Canadiens in Montreal.

In the new Western Division, St. Louis Blues meet the Flyers in Philadelphia and Minnesota North Stars will go to Los Angeles to start their round with the Kings.

The Canadiens also have their injury problems. Goalie Lorne Worsley suffered a pulled muscle in a pre-game warmup Saturday night, but coach Toe Blake says he appears fit and will start against the Bruins "if we can get him through the warmup without getting injured."

Blake expects defencemen Terry Harper and Ted Harris, both of whom have been sidelined by injuries, to start against the Bruins. And thinks that Henri Richard, hobbled by knee injuries throughout the season, to be all right if he can score an early goal to restore his confidence. Defenceman Serge Savard, hit in the face by a puck will fill the gap left by the absence of Harper and Harris, but is expected to be able to play.

The Montreal coach expects a tough series against the resurgent Bruins, who won five and lost five against Montreal during the season. He hopes he can get his team in the proper frame of mind after the nothing games they played and lost at the tail end of the season.

The Montreal-Boston game will be carried on television by the CBC starting at 6:30 p.m. PST.

The second game in the round will be played in Montreal Saturday. Minnesota is at Los Angeles and St. Louis at Philadelphia Saturday while the Hawks and Rangers meet in New York Sunday.

Birds Have Woes

By Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles will be without another of their 1966 pennant heroes when the 1968 baseball season begins Monday and last year's champion Boston Red Sox are not doing much better.

The Red Sox, already without injured pitching ace Jim Lonborg for at least the first month of the season, sent slugging Tony Conigliaro flying to Boston Tuesday to undergo further eye examinations. Conigliaro promptly became involved in a traffic mishap. (See story on right.)

MISSES SERIES

Conigliaro suffered blurred vision when he was hit near the left eye by a pitch last August, and missed the rest of the 1967 season and the World Series.

Baltimore's worries are not as acute as the pitching rich Orioles sent Wally Bunker to join Jim Palmer in the minor leagues to work out pitching problems.

Bunker, also 23, won 19 games in 1964 and 10 games and a World Series game in 1966 before tendonitis limited him to a 3-7 record last year.

Palmer, another Series winner who was 15-10 that year, also has been bothered by arm trouble and was sent down earlier this spring, and Stu Miller, the star of the bullpen, was sold Monday.

Other pitchers, like Bo Belinsky, had a good day.

WISHES COME TRUE

Belinsky got his wish from Houston Astros and was sold to Hawaii of the Pacific Coast League.

Fryman, acquired by Philadelphia from Pittsburgh Pirates in the Jim Bunning trade last winter, turned in a three-hitter for seven innings and struck out 11 as the Phillies blanked Minnesota Twins 1-0 on Tony Taylor's sixth-inning homer.

McCormick, who won 22 games, the Cy Young Award and the comeback award in the National League in 1967, stopped Cleveland without a run for six innings in San Francisco Giants' 6-1 triumph over the Indians.

WILSON SHARP

Wilson, another 22-game winner last season, gave up six hits and one run in seven innings, pitching Detroit Tigers over Chicago White Sox 5-1.

Cincinnati Reds got a one-hitter for five innings from Pappas en route to a 4-2 decision over Houston Astros.

Ron Hansen hammered a two-out ninth inning homer to break a tie and hand Washington Senators a 5-4 victory over Boston Red Sox. Stephenson stopped the Senators on two hits and one unearned run for seven innings before Washington scored four runs in the last two innings against relievers.

Jim Hardin, John O'Donoghue and Pete Richert stopped New York Yankees on five hits in Baltimore's 2-1 12-inning triumph.

HARD-LUCK CONIGLIARO INJURED IN CAR CRASH

BOSTON (AP) — Tony Conigliaro of the Red Sox suffered minor injuries early today in a two-car collision only hours after returning to Boston from spring training to undergo eye tests.

The young outfielder was taken to hospital for treatment of bruises. He was released a short time later, a hospital spokesman said.

Conigliaro was alone in his car and several youths were in the other vehicle, police said.

Cogiliaro, bothered by his vision and suffered headaches "almost daily," has been struggling all spring trying to come back from the beaning which sidelined him for the last six weeks of the 1967 season.

He flew back Tuesday night from the Red Sox' Florida spring training quarters in Winter Haven. He said he plans to see Dr. Thomas Tierney, the club physician, about his headaches, and also to visit an eye doctor Thursday.

Rink Boss Predicts Seals Will Stay On

OAKLAND (AP)—"I think the Seals can do well here next season," president Robert T. Nahas of the Oakland Coliseum Complex said Tuesday.

"I don't believe they should be judged on their first season in the National Hockey League."

Seals' owners—disappointed at heavy losses—recently contracted to sell the NHL franchise, valued at $5,000,000 to Vancouver interests.

That would require approval by nine of the NHL's 12 governors on two points: the sale itself, and the transfer to Vancouver which has a Western League franchise.

The matter may be presented to the NHL governors in June unless firm arrangements to keep Seals here are made meantime.

ATTENDANCE SLOW

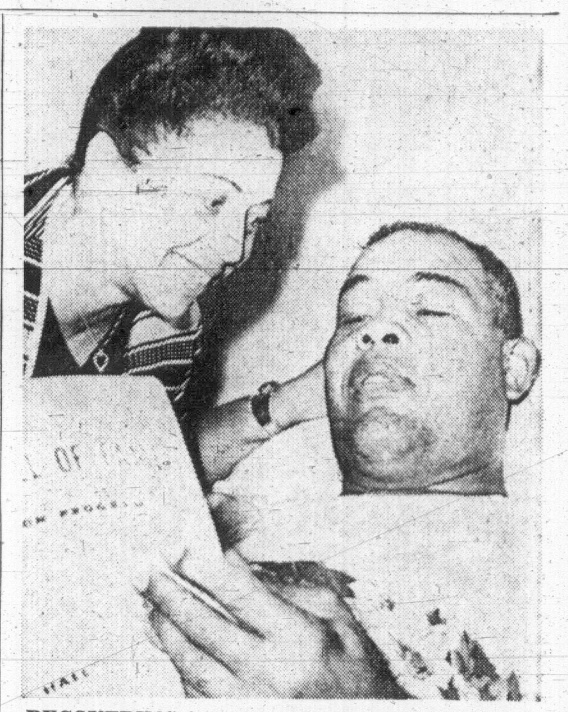

Barry van Gerbig, principal Seals' owner, said operation of the club cost him $3,000,000 last season, chiefly because of poor attendance.

Nahas reminded sports writers the Coliseum has a four-year contract with the Seals, with a two-year option. He recalled assertions that the Seals had drawn fewer fans than when they were in the WHL and cited these figures: 113,465 in 1964-5 and 110,307 in 1965-6 in the San Francisco Cow Palace, and 197,458 in Oakland in 1966-7.

Last season they drew 211,910 as an NHL expansion club.

"In view of their standing and ticket prices, I think they did well, and will improve," he said.

Starting on top by winning their opening game, the Seals steadlily worked into the cellar. Ticket prices ranged from $5.50 down, second highest in the Western Division.

Boycott Wrong Says Joe Louis

DETROIT (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, looking weary but healthy after a bout with the surgeons, told reporters Tuesday Negro athletes will make a serious mistake if they decide not to represent the U.S. at the Olympic Games.

"Maybe they don't have equal opportunity in America, but they're gaining it every day," the Brown Bomber said, sitting in a wheelchair.

"And that's something you should realize. Things are improving. If they were going backwards, it would be different."

Louis, who had his gall blader and his appendix removed last Tuesday, also said Cassius Clay erred by not entering the Army, but that he still considers Clay the world's heavyweight champ.

Wearing a colorful robe, Louis was wheeled into the director's office at the new $3 million Kirwood Hospital in Detroit. He was flanked by his nurses, his wife, Martha, who is an attorney in Beverly Hills, Calif.,

OLD FRIEND

They included Dr. Robert Bennett, who has been Louis' doctor since the time when Louis was in his boxing heyday in the late 1930s and 1940s.

The doctor, one of four on the operating team, said Louis' condition was satisfactory and that he may be released from the hospital within 10 days.

Louis said he felt the idea of running tournaments to find a successor to Clay, who was dethroned when a jury found him guilty of a draft dodging charge, "is ridiculous."

"As far as I'm concerned Clay is still champion, at least until he goes to jail or retires. I think he made an awful mistake by not going into the Army. He threw away a brilliant career."

And as in many times in the past, Louis ducked the question on whether he could have beaten Clay, if they had met at the height of their careers.

"It would have been a good match. I don't know who would have won. I think Clay is good enough to fight anybody," Louis said.

Campbell River Rink Shares Lead

CALAGARY (CP) — Four rinks shared first place Tuesday after four rounds in the Canadian Firefighters' curling championship.

British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Southern Ontario broke away from a six-way scramble for the lead by picking up their third victories in the fourth round. All four rinks had one loss each in the eight-rink, round-robin competition.

Bill McIntosh of Campbell River, skipped the B.C. champions, dropped a 12-5 decision to Southern Ontario in the third round but bounced back in the next match to breeze to a 15-3 victory over Quebec.

LIONS SIGN ANOTHER

Stamps Trade Lovell Coleman

(Times News Services)

Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football League have traded fullback Lovell Coleman, 30, for linebacker Mike Blum, 24, and offensive halfback David Cranmer, 22, of Ottawa Rough Riders in the Eastern Conference, it was announced today.

LOVELL COLEMAN
... dealt to Ottawa

Coleman, an eight-year veteran with the Stampeders, was named to the all-Western conference and the all-Canadian teams in 1963, 1964 and 1965 and was Canada's outstanding player in 1964.

Blum, a six-foot one-inch, 220-pound outside linebacker, has been a first-string performer for Ottawa for the last four seasons. Cranmer was a starting offensive halfback at Bowling Green University for the last three seasons.

All three players are classed as Canadians.

LIONS SIGN ONE

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, British Columbia Lions announced the signing of 235-pound defensive tackle Gene Bachman of the University of Southern Mississippi.

Lions' manager Denny Veitch said Bachman, 21, played three seasons with Southern Mississippi, including the 1967 season when the university led U.S. major colleges in total defence.

Bachman was named Southern Mississippi's best player in 1967 and was defensive captain.

AND ALSO...

Winnipeg signed a pair of rookie imports — guard Tom Luettke of Bowling Green and defensive half Gay Egerdahl from Duluth.

Phil Tucker, a speedy offensive guard from Texas Tech, was signed by Edmonton while the Argonauts waved the contract of Bob Blakley, a halfback who played two seasons with Toronto Rifles of the Continental League.

Pony League Body Seeks New Route

Plans are in the works to affiliate the Greater Victoria Pony League Association — made up of Carnarvon, Layritz and Triangle Leagues — with the British Cogumbia Minor Baseball Association.

The local leagues previously played under jurisdiction of the U.S. Pony organization, but feel that the B.C. body, an affiliate of the Western Canada Minor Baseball Association, "offers better opportunities." With this end in mind, league officials hope to switch affiliation before the start of the upcoming season.

A total of 33 pony leagues now are part of the B.C. organization. Previously, in order to reach the pinnacle of a baseball season — the "World Series," — teams in B.C. had to battle American teams.

Under the new system, all leagues will compete locally in their own areas for the right of representing not only Western Canada but also other areas of Canada, in the "World Series." Thus, the Western Canada champion goes directly into "World Series."

The Western Canada champion will be one of the eight teams vying for the title as well as teams from the four regular divisions in the United States, the Pacific Area (Japan, Hawaii, Korea) and South America.

Organizational Meeting Carded

The meeting will be to fill out the directorate and formulate plans for the coming season. All interested persons are urged to attend.

LONG-SHOT DAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Jockey Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., brought home consecutive long shots at Aqueduct race track Tuesday. He scored with Weary Traveller $27.80 in the third race and Mid-Billingsgate $50.80 in the fourth.

Bucks Dominate Awards Evening

The champion Ingraham Buckaroos, as expected, dominated the individual trophy parade in the Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League.

Ken Griffin was picked the leading goalkeeper while Gord Strongman emerged as the leading scorer. Bucks also placed Ray Beech, Gordie Wickware and Ben Webber on the all-star squad.

Jim Place of Victoria Press was the league's most valuable player while teammate Brian Turnbull, Pete Dawe of VMD and Pat Murphy of Drake Hotel also stepped forward for individual recognition in the annual awards presentation.

Finley Gets Lengthy Lease For Athletics

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland Athletics baseball club of the American League have signed a 20-year lease on the 50,000-seat Oakland Coliseum, with options for 20 more.

He reported Athletics' owner Charles O. Finley will pay a minimum $125,000 annual rental, and this escalating scale: five per cent of the gate up to 1,450,000 attendance; seven per cent from that to 1,900,000, and 10 per cent above 1,900,000.

Finley hopefully predicts 1,500,000 his first season here. Nahas also told sports writers:

Finley has contracted for a $1,000,000 scoreboard with a memory which can instantly flash a player's up-to-the-minute records and such information as "Bando's 10th home run off Zachary."

Nahas also reported the coliseum directors are thinking of possible expansion of both the Coliseum and the Arena, whose capacity varies from 12,000 to 14,000 with its use.

Youth Challenges Former Winners

Young challengers step up to face the favorites.

That's how the first-round draw turned out for medallist Bill Wakeham and defending champion Vaughan Trapp in the annual Vancouver Island Open golf championship.

First round of match play will be Sunday at Uplands Golf Club.

Wakeham, medallist with a two-over-par 72 at Colwood last Sunday, faces city junior champion Mike Gray, who will have home-course knowledge on his side against the seasoned professional.

Trapp, assistant professional at Oak Bay, is paired against another tough young challenger—Brian Stott. A one-time Cowichan resident, Stott now plays out of Gorge Vale.

Two other former champions who qualified for the match-play battles also meet young challengers. Cowichan's Norm Boden, 1961 champion, plays Gorge Vale junior Dave Mick while two-time winner Laurie Carroll has drawn Roger Bishop, an Uplands intermediate member.

Draw and starting times are printed above.

AND FIRST PLACE...

Ref's 'Inexperience' Cost Kings a Point

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles Kings said Tuesday a referee's inexperience cost his club a first-place finish in the National Hockey League's West Division.

Kings tied Oakland 2-2 in their regular season finale, and Cooke claimed his club should have won 3-2.

In the third period of the game, Real Lemieux of the Kings put the puck in the Oakland goal, but referee Ron Wicks disallowed the goal on grounds that Bill Flett of Los Angeles was in the goal crease when the puck went in.

Coach Red Kelly claimed Flett "was knocked into the crease by Aut Erickson of the Seals which makes the goal legal."

Cooke said: "If the puck was in the net first, it doesn't matter whether Flett was pushed in, walked in or dropped in, the goal counts."

FILMS TELL STORY

He said films show the puck crossed the goal line before Flett entered the crease.

With the tie, Los Angeles finished the season with 72 points, one behind Philadelphia. A victory would have added a point to the Kings' total.

Cooke said he asked the NHL office several times to assign a veteran referee to the game because of its importance.

Cooke admitted: "Of course, there is no way of recovering that last goal. . . . We were bilked."

Players' Threats May Veto Playoff

QUEBEC (CP) — Jim Morrison, president of the players' association of the American Hockey League, said Tuesday night the proposed playoff between the champions of the AHL and the Western Hockey League may not be held this year.

Morrison, a defenceman with Quebec Aces of the AHL, said the WHL players voted not to participate in the game because the AHL refuses to recognize the AHL players' association.

"As far as I know," Morrison said in an interview, "the players in the WHL have decided not to play against the future champions of the AHL because the directors of the AHL refuse to recognize our organization."

Morrison said a letter was sent last January to AHL president Jack Butterfield, requesting a meeting between league authorities and player representatives, but no reply had been received.

Lengthy Shuttle Famine Ends

CALGARY (CP) — Canada claimed its first international badminton victory over the United States in 35 years by winning four of five internationally-sanctioned matches here Tuesday night.

The Canadian team of Jamie Paulson of Calgary, Wayne Macdonnell of Vancouver and Yves Pare of Montreal won the four singles matches, beating Stan Hales, Jr., of Pasadena, Rod Starkey of San Diego and Larry Saben of Los Angeles.

Paulson, the Canadian Closed champion, defeated Hales 15-7, 17-14, while Macdonnell swept past Starkey, 15-5, 15-0.

The only U.S. victory came in the doubles when Hales and Saben combined to beat Paulson and Pare, 7-19, 15-8, 15-9.

In other singles matches, Macdonnell, displaying the form which saw him sweep to six straight Canadian championships before losing to Paulson at Victoria last week, romped to a 15-5, 15-6, victory over Hales, while Paulson defeated Starkey 15-3, 15-7.

Starkey is seeded third in the U.S.

In Tuesday's first match, Paulson fell behind Hales 7-0 but then came back for 15 straight points.

B.C. JOCKEY CLUB

Jones Point Champ

SEATTLE (AP) — Portland Buckaroos claimed their fourth straight regular-season Western Hockey League title and captain Art Jones took the individual scoring championship with 87 points on 34 goals and 53 assists.

His 87 points were his lowest total in five seasons and matched the all-time low for a WHL scoring leader, set in 1951 by Eddie Dorohoy of Victoria.

San Diego's Len Ronson, with 45 goals, is the league's goal-scoring champion. Top playmaker for the sixth straight season is Guyle Fielder of Seattle, who finished with 55 assists

TOP GOALIES

A pair of Buckaroos, Jim McLeod and Marv Edwards, both finished the campaign with a goals-against average lower than the all-time record 2.40 posted by Gump Worsley of Vancouver in 1954.

McLeod played 1,961 minutes and yielded 73 goals for an average of 2.23. Edwards played 2,366 minutes, gave up 93 goals, and finished with a record of 2.36. A goalkeeper must have played a minimum of 2,100 minutes—35 games—to be eligible for the leading goalkeeper award. Edwards, therefore, gets the recognition.

Earl Heiskala of Seattle wound up with 157 minutes off the ice on 51 minors, five majors, two misconducts and one game misconduct to lead in penalties. The 157-minute total is the lowest since 1954 when Pete Durham of New Westminster finished with the same figure.

TEST CRICKET

'Sobering' Thoughts Remain With English

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuters) — England must score 308 runs in 330 minutes today to win the fifth and final cricket test here after the West Indies was dismissed Tuesday for 264 in their second innings after a memorable fifth day's play.

Gary Sobers, West Indies captain said to be the world's greatest cricketer, was 95 not out when West Indies second innings ended 10 minutes before the close and left England without time to reply

Sobers made 152 in West Indies first innings and took three wickets in England's first innings, which ended Tuesday at 371—giving West Indies a first-innings lead of 43.

West Indies must win this match to square the series and retain their world cricket crown. England won the fourth test after the first three were tied.

BECOMES NO. 7

England's record-breaking ninth-wicket stand was extended to 109 and Tony Lock reached 89 before Lester King wound up the innings by taking the last two wickets.

West Indies then raced to 72 without loss in 80 minutes before lunch and added a further 115 for the loss of five wickets in the two hours between lunch and tea.

Sobers, who became only the seventh batsman in cricket history to achieve 6,000 runs in test cricket when he reached 36, once again stood alone against the England fast bowlers. John Snow was again the England bowling hero, taking another six wickets to bring his match haul to 10.

One-Goal Edge Assists Varsity

One-goal difference in scoring gave University of Victoria a win over Victoria Redmen in a men's field hockey tournament Sunday.

Uvic and Redmen had played to a 2-2 tie in the final, forcing a decision based on goal averages. The University squad defeated Tigers 2-0 while Redmen could only manage a 1-0 in its other game.

Kiwanians Connect

South Africa Gets Olympic Accreditation

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — The head of South Africa's Olympic group said Tuesday he has received the International Olympic Committee's accreditation for South Africa to compete at the 1968 Games.

"The Mexican invitation is now merely a matter of form," added Frank Braun, chairman of the South African Olympic Games Association.

More than 40 nations have said they will boycott the Games at Mexico City, Oct. 12-27, if South Africa competes.

South Africa was barred from the 1964 Games because of its racial policies but was reinstated by the ICC recently.

Meanwhile in Rome, Italy's Olympic Committee declared in a letter published Tuesday that the South African Olympic organization should be ruled "legally inexistent."

STRONG FEELINGS

The letter, from Giulio Onesti, president of the Italian committee, to Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, described as "legally absurd" the IOC resolution authorizing South Africa's readmission.

Onesti noted that the Olympic charter bars racial discrimination and obliges national Olympic committees to enforce the ban against discrimination in their countries.

He said the South African Olympic Committee could not do this and therefore forfeits its right to recognition by the IOC.

Onesti's letter was written in view of the meeting of the IOC's executive committee at Lausanne, Switzerland, April 20-21, to discuss the thorny South African problem.

TABLE TENNIS

Val Sweeps Three Titles

Val McIvor collected her third win in the Oak Bay Recreation Commission's Table Tennis championships Monday at S. J. Willis School.

Val teamed up with Peter Ngai to win the mixed doubles over Chad Evans and Jean Hamilton. She previously took the women's singles and a share in the women's doubles crown.

Men's doubles title went to Pete Murray and Eric Remes, who downed Ngai and George Clark in the finals.

Mets Take On A Music-Maker

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) —Utility-infielder Phil Linz, who has played previously with New York Yankees and Philadelphia Phillies, was signed by the New York Mets Wednesday.

Linz spent some time with the Mets last season but was released. He now rejoins Met-coach Yogi Berra, who, as Yankee manager in 1964, fined Linz for playing his harmonica after a defeat.

Theme on Safety At Sports Show

Accent on water safety and safety in all outdoor sports will be the theme for this year's Victoria Sportsman's Show April 17-20 at the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

In addition to a large display of outdoor sporting equipment—including everything for the fisherman, hunter and camper—a number of experts will be on hand to demonstrate various sporting skills.

Included in the instructing group is Jim Gilbert, who will show correct methods of bait rigging, cutting and casting. He will be present each evening and Saturday afternoon to also answer any questions on fishing.

INDOOR POOL

Special demonstrations will be held daily featuring log birling, scuba diving and fly casting in the indoor pool which will be erected in the curling rink.

Other noteworthy attractions include the Navy's gymnastic team, demonstrations by the Victoria Racquet-Club and the Boys' Club of Victoria, and lessons in water safety by the Victoria Outboard Club.

Golfers and archery fans have not been forgotten. Fairways addicts will find local professionals on hand to offer tips on shot-making, and members of the Victoria Bowmen will demonstrate bow-and-arrow techniques and permit visitors to try their luck in firing at targets.

The show, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich, will be about twice the size of last year's. The entire Sports Centre area will be utilized with the Sportsman's Show taking up both the hockey arena and the curling rink. A midway will occupy the outdoor area immediately behind the Sports Centre.

The local Kiwanians also are sponsoring the Sports Celebrity dinner at the Empress Hotel on the Tuesday night preceding the show.

STUDY SHOWS

Success Kind To the Heart

BOSTON (AP)—Heart disease and business success dont' go hand in hand, the findings of a five-year study of 270,000 men employed in the Bell Telephone system show.

Dr. Lawrence E. Hinkle of Cornell Medical School told the annual meeting of the American College of Physicians Monday that the men who rise to executive positions seem to have body builds, eating and exercise habits that permit them to live with the tensions of their jobs.

Hinkle said the study also found that:

—Men who remain at lower working levels tend to be shorter, fatter, eat more than top executives and have higher rates of heart disease than those men in executive positions.

—The men with college degrees are generally slimmer and taller and, by the age of 55, have reduced their smoking to about half the amount of those without degrees.

—Men who rose to high positions quickly, coming to the company without college degrees and moving from blue collar to managerial jobs, have heart attack rates no higher than those non-college men the same age who remained workmen all their lives.

From 30 to 64, managers and executives had lower rates of heart disease than the workmen and foremen.

Body May Be Fuel For Robot Pump

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. government heart researcher forecasts development by 1973 of a totally implantable artificial heart based on a new concept of energy-supply: Use of the body's own digested food and inhaled oxygen.

Electrical energy to pump the robot heart would come from a fuel cell that would burn oxygen from the blood stream and also glucose, a form of sugar produced by food digested in the normal fashion.

Dr. Frank Hastings, chief of the artificial heart research program of the National Heart Institute, told The Associated Press that promising results have been achieved at the laboratory level in developing the fuel-cell concept.

WOULD HELP MANY

He said it appears to be the best prospect yet for ultimately making completely implantable artificial hearts available to hundreds of thousands of cardiac patients newly stricken each year. He indicated it would eliminate the need for human heart transplants.

The idea would be to graft the fuel-cell—consisting of a porous but tough, jelly-like plastic material—into the aorta, the body's major artery, beginning at the point where the blood vessel normally connects with the natural heart. The cell would employ a thin sheet of gold-alloy fibres which would act as a catalyst in promoting energy-producing chemical reactions.

Electrical energy, produced by the fuel-cell, would flow to the "muscles" of the nearby implanted artificial heart, enabling it to pump blood in and out of itself.

The robot heart itself would consist of a tough but flexible rubbery material, which would be covered with a thin envelope of living tissue fashioned from a vein in the patient's leg.

Drive Started To Get $50,000 For Saanich Hall

An appeal for $50,000 for a community hall in Royal Oak is being launched.

A meeting of interested persons will be held Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the library of Royal Oak elementary school.

"We hope to obtain people to fill executive offices," said Mrs. Doreen Goosney, 4581 Pipeline.

With a community association formed, there would then be a drive launched for funds for a new building for dances, teen club, boys' club, scouting, guides, badminton, basketball and other activities.

Mrs. Goosney said school facilities now being used are unsuitable as sports interfere with hobbies and there are supervising problems with a big area.

The community hall would be built on the old school ground opposite the credit union building. The land is owned by Saanich and council has given residents nine months to see if they can round up the money for the hall.

Q Mrs. E. R. asks Canadian Carpet Clinic:

"How often should I have my rugs cleaned? Mine have been down five years without being cleaned."

A I'm Really Surprised...

Certainly you wouldn't wait too long to have your clothes cleaned, the kitchen floor scrubbed, or to change bedsheets, would you? I can't imagine why homemakers think that their rugs should be treated differently. As a matter of fact, the initial investment is so great that I think that more and proper care should be given to your rugs. Whenever soiling is apparent, you should call a professional cleaner. Have you looked at your rugs lately?

'VIOLENT STRUGGLE' TOOK PLACE COURT TOLD

Man Jailed Six Months After Car Accident

A man involved in an accident at Pembroke and Fernwood late March 9 was sentenced in central court Tuesday to six months in jail.

City police constable Ab Wells told the court he attended the accident and one of the drivers, Lloyd DeWolfe, 25, of 1018 Balmoral, was told he was under arrest for impaired driving.

Const. Wells said he tried to reason with DeWolfe, but the accused became belligerent and a "violent struggle" took place.

DeWolfe pleaded guilty to assaulting a police officer and impaired driving. He told the court he was on parole at the time from a five year sentence imposed in 1964 for robbery with violence.

He said his parole had been suspended as a result of the incident March 9.

Magistrate Ostler sentenced DeWolfe to six months on the assault charge and fined him $350 or 30 days on the impaired driving charge.

Two 20-year-olds were fined $50 each in central court Tuesday for consuming alcohol on licenced premises.

Britain Picks Leaders Quietly

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP) — Britain's members of Parliament aim to keep the election of political party leaders quick and painless by leaving it all to the experts—themselves.

Despite pressure in some quarters for more public campaigns with an extended electorate, there is little urge in Britain to copy the TV-spectacular type of leadership conventions featured in Canada and the United Sttes.

"The general instinct favors the present system," says Enoch Powell, the Tory ideologist who finished third when the Confervative parliamentary caucus replaced Sir Alec Douglas-Home by Edward Heath within a quiet week in 1915.

The systems are basically the same for Conservatives, Labor and Liberals. The party caucus in the House of Commons elects the leader without formal reference to the party faithful outside.

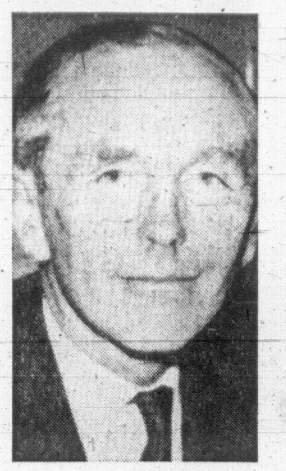

Spokesmen for all three parties say it would be theoretically possible to nominate a candidate who has no seat in the Commons, but it would be highly unlikely and even less probable that he would be elected.

Majority

In each case, a winner requires an outright majority of the votes cast—meaning more than one ballot might be needed—and the Conservatives use a more complex system whereby procedure varies slightly on successive ballots.

In practice, leaders chosen by the Commons caucus are recognized as chiefs of the party at large.

Conservative caucus rules state bluntly that the chosen leader "will be presented for election as party leader" to a full party meeting and there is no record of the full party resisting.

SIR ALEC
. . . dignity and calm

Efficiency

The same applies to the Labor leader when the party is holding power. In opposition, the Labor caucus elects a leader each autumn—in practice renews the leader's mandate.

Sir Alec Douglas-Home summed up the prevailing British attitude to leadership elections in his brief resignation speech to the Tory party caucus July 22, 1965.

"It is up to you to see that the election is completed swiftly and efficiently, and with dignity and calm," he said.

The Tory MPs, using the procedure newly devised by Douglas-Home because traditional methods of raising up a leader had fallen into disrepute, managed to make the first caucus election swift and efficient, reasonably dignified and fairly calm.

Four days after Douglas-Home's admonition, Heath, Reginald Maudling and Powell had been nominated. Just two days more and Heath emerged winner.

It was all much smoother and gentler on the politician's public reputation than Britain's nearest thing to a televised leadership convention in October, 1963.

Then, Harold Macmillan resigned as the Conservative party met in annual conference at Blackpool and the public was able to see the undignified scramble for power that followed.

Consultation

The Blackpool fiasco and recriminations that followed killed the old Tory practice of having senior party dignitaries simply name a new leader after what Macmillan called "the customary processes of consultation."

The Labor party, with closer attention to the party's constitutional niceties, spins out its caucus elections to greater length than either Conservatives or Liberals and thereby gives press, broadcasting and thus the public more chance to join in on the fringes.

Although it took Labor four weeks to complete the election of Harold Wilson from the time of Hugh Gaitskell's death Jan. 18, 1963, most of the campaigning by the friends and agents of Wilson and also-rans George Brown and James Callaghan was done on the quiet in parliamentary lobbies.

The Liberals were so mindful of making a swift and dignified transition from the leadership of Jo Grimmond to Jeremy Thorpe last year that they provoked a rank-and-file outcry.

Bidders Got Bargains In Mystery Packages

Bidders got more than they bargained for with items sold under wraps at a mystery auction last week.

The auction, sponsored by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce to raise money for the Canadian Mental Health Association, offered a travel package and mystery chest for bidding, a spokesman announced Monday.

The travel item, purchased by Mrs. John Troughton, of 2616 Dean Ave., included two return air tickets to Vancouver from Totem Travel agency, five gallons of gas from University Service, two gallons of lubrication oil from Shelbourne BA station, a lube and oil change from ESF Centre and a shampoo and set from Margo's Beauty Salon.

ITEMS DONATED

The chest, bought by Rick MacDonald, 440 Simcoe, included a hair set and shampoo from Margo's, two tickets to the Jerry Gosley Show, five gallons of gas from University Service and a lube and oil change from Cadboro Bay Motors.

Other mystery items were pulled from the auction when bidding fell below expectations, the spokesman said. They will be auctioned off by Lund's auctioneers to add to the $1,000 profit from the auction and sale last week.

The association was trying to raise $2,500 for the down payment on a larger building for their halfway house for mental patients.

Our cones are for her safety

Service with safety is the B.C. Telephone Company's objective and cones help us meet it.

The B.C. Telephone Company has more than 1,500 vehicles on the road to help bring telephone services to the people of British Columbia.

These vehicles come in a variety of sizes and shapes. And we know from experience that they often attract a lot of interest, especially among curious youngsters like Peggi, the five-year-old ice cream eater pictured above.

We at B.C. Telephone are keenly interested in her safety and that of all youngsters, just as we are keenly interested in the safety of all British Columbians.

That's why we take special care to train our vehicle operators in safe driving and to provide practices designed to prevent accidents.

It requires that each of our vehicles carry cones of bright red color and that each driver place one cone in front of his vehicle and another behind it when he parks it.

Before he moves his truck, he'll walk to the front and from there to the back of it to pick up the cones. As he circles the vehicle, he'll become aware of objects around it — including any youngsters who may be nearby.

In this way, he prevents accidents in which it is so easy to harm such things as bicyles, tricycles, children's toys — and ice-cream-cone-eating youngsters with incurable curiosity.

B.C. Telephone's more than 7,200 employees strive constantly to provide good telephone service. They also strive to do so in complete safety for all concerned.

Our objective is service with safety and the cone method of circle check for vehicles is just one more way in which we meet it.

Craftsmen Find Window To Display Their Work

By KATHRINE THOMAS

The feel of the clay—kneaded firm yet giving.

Then the form taking shape—curved, elongated, flattened. The drying bowl, vase or casserole tooled, marked with an original design.

Alice Gardner decided on the spur of the moment one summer to take some pottery lessons to augment her interest in another craft—weaving.

"But once I hit the clay, that was it," she says. "I've never been interested in anything else since."

She studied with Leonard Osborne who has a pottery studio on West Saanich Road, for four years "burying myself in clay."

Then at an annual art gallery sale of pottery she was amazed at the "tremendous response from local people. I got a clear insight into what could be done with a handicraft shop in Victoria.

"There was a real need for an outlet for craftsmen which would remove from them the difficulty and inconvenience of trying to find a market."

So last summer Mrs. Gardiner opened Bastion Handicrafts in the Village Fair, Bastion Square.

"Now craftsmen can work under their own conditions yet have an attractive shop in which to display their things," she says.

The shop will accept work from any local artist—at the moment Mrs. Gardner is selling "upwards of 20 potters" together with weaving, jewelery and sculpture.

However Mrs. Gardner is not just concerned with selling pottery—she is determined to "keep the craft going."

Anyone can learn the potter's art: wives, secretaries . . . even men!

Much of her time is spent teaching beginners pottery in her studio on the second floor. At the moment she has 24 students—housewives, office workers, men ("they make very good potters.")

The classes held four times a week are limited to six in each group so that everyone is able to use a wheel.

Luckily for Mrs. Gardner, her husband's hobby is making the wheels and the equipment she needs.

The course consists of a two hour weekly series of 12 lessons. "Usually people can decide after 12 lessons whether they are going to approach it as a hobby or more seriously," she says.

To direct her student's development, Mrs. Gardner uses a step by step technique learned from Mr. Osborne.

"We need the shortest technique possible because people have a limited time to spend. It's just teaching craftsmanship—a means to an end so we can produce well-crafted pots.

"A disciplined technique is necessary—you have to be willing to cut a pot through the centre. It's heartbreaking but the only way to see what has been done."

Mrs. Gardner also insists that her students make notes so they will have a reference when they are working on their own. "You have to be able to call on a logical procedure," she says.

By the sixth lesson, students are already producing pots in the specific shapes they are studying. By the end of the course, they can expect to have two or three finished pots—decorated and glazed.

Mrs. Gardner gives her student one or two basic glazes to use but the time is devoted mainly to the construction of the pot.

She doesn't feel any particular physical ability is needed. "I'm constantly amazed how young women who have never been involved in anything strenuous turn out such good things. It may take them a bit longer but if they have the desire, it carries them through."

Future plans call for an enlargement of the store with an activity area where people could come and watch all kinds of crafts being made on the premises.

And Mrs. Gardner has a strong belief in the long-range value of crafts. "With more leisure time each year, people are looking for something to turn to. Crafts make the greatest appeal because you are working with your hands."

Philip's View of Race Wedlock Snipped Out by Television Firm

LONDON (AP) — A London newspaper quotes Prince Philip as saying he did not think he would mind if one of his children married a colored person.

The Evening Standard also quotes the husband of Queen Elizabeth as saying the choice would be up to the children.

The newspaper says Philip made the remark in a recent television interview. But, it charges, the passage was censored from the program by "a little gentle surgery from Buckingham Palace."

"We had nothing to do with the editing of the film," he said. "This is done by the television company concerned."

He declined comment on what the prince actually said.

The television company, Tyne Tees, had no immediate comment on the newspaper report.

The Evening Standard says an interviewer asked Philip whether he would mind if one of his children married a colored person and adds: "There was a pause, and finally Prince Philip said he didn't think that he would and that anyway, it would be up to them."

The paper says: "Upon subsequent reflection, he felt he had not given a sufficiently robust answer—and since the program had overrun by 30 seconds this part was snipped out."

Sex Outside Prison Urged for Inmates

LONDON (Reuters) — Conjugal visits for prisoners and the arming of some guards were recommended by a committee here Tuesday as two ways of keeping prisoners inside prison.

It also suggested better living conditions, stronger walls, 40-hour working week for prisoners and allowing prisoners to grow beards and mustaches.

The committee, the advisory council on the penal system, was set up by the home secretar in 1966 after nearly 700 prisoners, including master spy George Blake, escaped—and prison security became a national joke.

Conjugal visits two or three times a year should be allowed as an experiment for less dangerous prisoners, it said. The visits should take place outside but close to the prison—sexual encounters inside prison were considered degrading.

Tipsy Visitor Goes to Jail

Fourteen days in jail was given a man in central court today after he caused a ruckus by being drunk in a hospital Monday night.

Court was told Raymond Fenwick, 38, of 940 Fullerton, went to visit a friend in St. Joseph's Hospital. He left after an argument, but subsequently returned and began arguing with hospital staff.

Police had to be called to remove him.

Soldier Executed

PHU CUONG (AP)—As 3,000 persons watched, an army firing squad executed a South Vietnamese soldier Tuesday for rape and murder. It was the first public execution in South Vietnam in two years and was evidently an attempt to convince the public that the military is not exempt from the criminal law.

Ship Held Second Time After Oil Slick Hassle

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Torrey Canyon's sister ship has been arrested for the second time in connection with efforts by Britain and France to make the owners pay more than $16,200,000 for oil pollution damage.

The British government claims it cost $8,400,000 to clean up the crude oil which spilled from the supertanker Torrey Canyon onto British shores a year ago after it ran onto a reef. The owners had to post that much bond last July to have the sister ship, the Lake Palourde, freed from arrest in Singapore.

Arthur Mayse

The theme of the Uvic spring symposium was "Community . . . Is It?" and as a student scout tells the story, one of the dissertations presently became cryptic to an almost terrifying degree.

Then, with the mental fog at its thickest, a strange fellow rose from the Island Hall audience. He wore red and blue motley—a costume that went out with the Divine Right of Kings—and bells tinkled as he shook his antic wand.

"Community indicates communication," he declared, "and we are not communicating here. Therefore I suggest we all go swimming."

The guest who broke up the meeting was Joachim Folkis, Vancouver's self-appointed follower of a profession badly in need of reviving.

Mr. Folkis is an authentic cap-and-bells fool, and possibly the first English-speaking one to delight the simple and prick the pompous since Charles I lost his head to Cromwellian Puritanism.

Now Canada Council has bestowed a $3,500 bursary on him, thereby respectabilizing his art and just possibly destroying the artist.

Having absorbed his share of fortune's buffets, however, he may manage to take the Canada Council recognition in his stride. I hope so, because in spite of his soberside detractors, this is a useful man.

We have any number of small-letter fools around, but you won't catch them dispensing the wares that Fool Folkis scatters so lavishly. He has Mother Goose rhymes for children, and limericks and riddles styled for all ages. He also deals in such explosive capsules of truth as he dispensed to the symposium.

Gentle Kim Folkis possesses a further gift that only a handful of Canadians past and present have been blessed with. Like Greg Clark (no fun-poker more kind) and Stephen Leacock who held a sunlit mirror to our foibles, he makes us laugh at ourselves.

There's no laughter so beneficial, either for an individual or a nation. It can dissolve a quarrel of family-shattering potential before irretrievable words are loosed. It could ease Canada's domestic problems if applied.

There are, of course, those who seem incapable of appreciating what a truly dedicated Fool has to offer his city and his country. Twice in the last hour, I have suffered an ear-bending from readers who were shocked practically out of their wits by the grant.

In their view, that $3,500 should have gone to some worthy cause like helping the handicapped or needy.

This same refrain was sounded fortissimo by Mayor Campbell of Vancouver, a go-getting young man who has gained the world but appears to be in some danger of losing his own soul.

If you happened to catch the Campbell outburst on little sister television, you may have been struck not only by his Vancouver worship's heat, but by his apparent ignorance of Canada Council's reason for existence.

This is not to bestow charity—after all, we have numerous other agencies concerned with basic good works—but to give promising contributors to the humanities and the arts a needed assist.

The Council is not always wise in its selections, some of whom have managed to keep their talents so thoroughly concealed that no rays escape. In the case of Mr. Folkis, though, I think it acted with commendable wisdom.

Perhaps its recognition of a resurrected art will encourage more Fools to assume the cap and bells of an ancient trade.

I doubt there's a city council, ours included, that wouldn't benefit from the presence of an official Fool.

The same for provincial legislatures, where a warning jingle of bells might reduce long, windy speeches to short, terse ones.

Unfortunately, qualified fools are in short supply, and Joachim Folkis can only spread himself so far. May he prosper, but not too much for his good!

Mother Nature Aggravated, Hurls Water at Tormentors

By PETE LOUDON

For about a year now drivers have been edging testily around men and equipment on Cook just north of Hillside.

If they've dug one hole they've dug 10.

City crews are still there today with a compressor and pump, a ditcher, three trucks and a battery of warning flashers.

Assistant city engineer Bill Jorgensen, who has studied the drainage history of Victoria back to the 1860s, tells the story. As far as the workmen are concerned it began a year or so ago when water began to erupt under the stands at Little League Park and in private property.

The immediate suggestion was that a water main was leaking.

The first holes went down as the city began re-lining the main. But when that job was finished, the water kept flowing out of the ground. So another series of holes was punched into the hillside.

The diggers found it wasn't the main. It was an underground stream, runoff from the hill which sits under Spencer Castle near where The Rise runs up to the Smith's Hill Reservoir. A changed drainage pattern set this underground brook to coursing along the path of the main.

The city is putting in an underground collection pit and new drains and the job has become "a big nuisance." But it's not uncommon where a city grows over an area that nature built with numerous springs, streams, bogs and creeks.

And it's hard to credit, but the Wesley subdivision near Cedar Hill and Bay Street once was a lake covering five to 10 acres.

It was drained by a creek that followed the present route of Haultain, Blackwood, Kings, westward to the harbor, passing under the Bay Street Armoury and exiting under the Crowe Gonnason lands.

Kings Road Ravine as it was called was covered in 60 years ago but there's still a massive pipe running along that route, tall enough for a man to walk in.

Generations of men have shunted nature's drainage paths to suit themselves. But once in a while, nature strikes back as it has with the hidden creek on Cook Street.

'Durable Drunk' Sentences Self To 30-Day Term

Charles Bland, 72, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk in the lobby of the Oxford Hotel, 777 Fort St., Tuesday afternoon.

Police said Bland had been evicted from the hotel in the morning but returned later in the day.

The accused has several previous convictions for similar offences, prompting Magistrate Ostler to call him "one of the most durable drunks around."

"If you'll just give me 30 days for this trip," Bland told the magistrate, "I think I'll pull out for Salt Spring Island when I get out."

"You are one of the few people who regularly sets his own sentence in this court," said Magistrate Ostler good-naturedly.

"Sentenced to 30 days."

FLYING TO BIG WILLIAMS LAKE EXERCISE

QORs Poised for 'Panther Leap'

Soldiers of the First Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, will be chief participants in a mammoth army exercise labelled Panther Leap next week.

The Esquimalt-based battalion will be flown to Williams Lake in Hercules transports from Patricia Bay starting Thursday, April 11. The move will be accomplished in 51 flights leaving every 45 minutes in a round-the-clock operation.

Northwest of Williams Lake, the battalion will be among 1,600 members of the First Canadian Infantry Brigade Group involved in an exercise covering 1,100 square miles.

It will be the largest military exercise in the B.C. interior since the Second World War.

The First Battalion, QORs, was committed to NATO last year as an integral part of the Allied Command Europe Mobile Force (Land). In this role it must be prepared to fly to Northern Europe on short notice should an emergency arise.

"The exercise is designed to prepare the battalion for this role," said Lt. Col. Herbert C. Pitts," the battalion's commanding officer.

The QORs will play the role of friendly soldiers whose task is to settle a simulated dispute between two opposing forces over land rights, cattle grazing and citizenship.

"This exercise will provide experience that is hard to match in any other location," Col. Pitts said.

"It will be the first time in the past year that our troops, with all their equipment, including the recently-arrived armored personnel carriers, will be able to fly into an exercise area.

"On our arrival at Williams Lake we will immediately assume our operational role and test our ability to move quickly."

The Queen's Own Rifles will be supported by members of Third Field Squadron, Royal Canadian Engineers, from Chilliwack. Return flights to Patricia Bay will begin April 23.

Wage Boost For Firemen In Saanich

Saanich and its 61 fire-fighters have agreed on a new one-year contract, it was announced today.

Settlement avoided arbitration which was indicated last week after talks broke down.

Further meetings were held Monday, Saanich altered its offer and fire-fighters voted approval Tuesday night, said Reeve Hugh Curtis, chairman of the personnel committee.

Average increase for all ranks is 5.25 per cent and the increase for fourth-year fire-fighters and above (38 men) is 6.76 per cent. Saanich earlier offered 6.53 per cent for fourth-year and higher ranks but employees rejected this.

$600 MONTHLY

Second- and third-year fire-fighters will receive $20 a month and there will be no increase for probationary ranks, the first year of service, he said.

A fourth-year fire-fighter now earns $562 a month and will make $600 under the new agreement.

Dean Presents Certificates To Sales Grads

Two students of Victoria Sales and Marketing Executives Club training course were given special recognition as class leaders Tuesday when graduating members went to dinner at the Red Lion Hotel.

Honors went to J. W. Braithwaite, of The Bay, and Linten Queale, of Queal Electronics, members of the first graduating class in the three-year course, offered in association with University of Victoria.

University Dean R. T. Wallace presented certificates to graduates.

LOOKOUT EXPANSION

Horse, Alpine Trails Planned on Mt. Tolmie

Part of the plan will go to the Capital Improvement District Commission for consideration but most of the work will be done by volunteers, said Coun. Alan Newberry, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

"Work should begin almost immediately," he said. "There are 42 acres and the plan covers it all."

TRAILS

The intent is to develop the park with horse and alpine trails, washrooms similar to those in provincial parks, expansion of the lookout at the top and more parking. He noted the reservoir area has been landscaped.

The capital items, such as washrooms and road widening, will go to CIDC and Saanich will go ahead with groups that have expressed an interest on non-capital items.

He said a horseriding club will develop trails according to the Saanich plan.

"The idea is to introduce a little more greenery into the park," he said.

"It will be extensive although it will take a number of years to bring it to completion. Trees and shrubs will be planted."

'ONLY THEMSELVES TO BLAME'

Tour Hucksters Face Heave-Ho

Tally-hos and sightseeing buses will vanish from the Causeway after this summer.

A special traffic sub-committee of Victoria city council decided this morning it could find no valid traffic-hazard reasons to ban the buses. But two aldermen and the city manager left no doubt that a total ban on Causeway sightseeing activities would be their recommendation to the city Group B committee and eventually city council.

Traffic engineer Dave Campbell told the committee that road-widening in the vicinity of the Causeway would relieve congestion.

"Parked buses will cause no more trouble than parked cars," he said. "I'm not saying that the buses can operate there forever without causing a traffic problem. But they will not cause a problem for the next two or three years."

The traffic outlook was not enough to satisfy Aldermen Cecil Parrott and committe chairman Hugh Ramsay.

"They (sight-seeing operators) should not be allowed on the Causeway," Ald. Parrot said. "Every year we get dozens and dozens of letters from visitors—and residents complaining about their activities. We should pass on the recommendation that they be banned."

Mr. Young agreed.

After reading a report from the engineering department which catalogued three years of inter-company strife and argument, Mr. Young said he had been forced to arrive at the conclusion "that the time has arrived when we must ask these people to operate from private property."

Prior to that Mr. Young said city staff members are tired of acting as arbitrators between rival bus companies fighting for the best spots on the Causeway.

"At the start they used to fight over a space allocation," he said. "When all the space had been used up we thought things might settle down, but then they started to argue as to who should have what space.

"I think we should advise them this September that this was their last year."

Mr. Campbell suggested a survey be taken this summer of visitors to ascertain their feelings on the Causeway as a huckster's paradise.

"You don't need a survey," answered Mr. Young. 'Just sling a camera over your shoulder as I did last year, look like a tourist, and you'll soon find out what the problem is."

Ald. Ramsay, who following the meeting said he is convinced the tour-barkers must go, told the committee the bus tour and tally-ho people had "only themselves to blame."

"Their own over-promotion has brought this situation about," he said.

Convention Petitions Falling Flat?

The general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Association said today "we've heard nothing further" of petitions being organized to call a special convention.

"I don't anticipate it will be received in our office unless it is a howling success," E. P. O'Connor said in Victoria.

"Nothing has been filed with the association to date."

The petitions began circulating almost a month ago after several militant branches of the association criticized the present leadership for not taking definite action during the two-week ferry strike which ended March 1.

While the association executive responded to a strike call, the ballot was conducted by mail and took a month to complete. The militant branches said simultaneous meetings during the ferry strike could have brought immediate action.

The petitions have to gain 30 per cent approval among the 11,100 BCGEA members before a special convention can be called.

Results of the mail strike vote were disclosed Tuesday.

They showed that 4,690 members supported strike action and 2,133 opposed with about 4,000 members not voting. The association's membership is just under half the 24,000 civil servants in B.C.

The executive took no action to implement the strike vote and has sought a meeting with the cabinet over Bill 33 which specifically outlaws civil service strikes and provides only discretionary, rather than mandatory, binding resolution of unresolved disputes.

SCHOOL COSTS

'It's Not Us' Bunn Replies To Peterson

Education Minister Peterson wasn't referring to Greater Victoria school district when he related cost figures in the legislature Tuesday, chairman Peter Bunn said today.

"When Peterson starts giving figures and doesn't attach names to figures, other people do," he said.

Mr Bunn referred to costs per pupil in three adjoining school districts, given by Mr. Peterson at $488, $559 and $750. The minister noted that the standard of education was lowest in the district with the highest cost.

THE OTHER THREE?

Greater Victoria was not one of the districts the minister referred to, Mr. Bunn said.

"People could easily read into the minister's statement that the districts are Sooke, Saanich and Victoria."

Last year the cost per pupil in this district was $511, "quite a reasonable cost relative to the figures mentioned," Mr. Bunn said.

Part of the value obtained in this district for "reasonably progressive education" is spent on two "highly trained social workers and a school psychologist, for example," which are not common in all districts.

Why Risk Blood, Sweat, Tears For Few Seconds?

How many cars do you drive past every day?

Each one represents a potential accident—involving you. But there are proven techniques for reducing the odds. They are detailed in a defensive driving course being conducted by the Institute of Adult Studies. You can enroll in the next course, begnning April 23, by phoning 385-1411. Fee is $8. In this article Times reporter Don Vipond details some of the tips in the third of the four-lesson course.

By DON VIPOND

When you study defensive driving you learn it's a lot of blood, sweat and tears you're risking to gain just a handful of seconds.

Funny things happen in the head of the driver who thirsts to pass everything on the road. If he paused to think, he'd realize he can never do it.

And all too often the driver being passed sees the other driver as a challenge to his car and skill. Crazy but true.

THEY BRISTLE

"Most people resent being passed," says instructor Jack Thornton. "But it's a normal part of driving. There's no need for it to affect you emotionally."

Just as there's no room in driving today for school boy competitions.

He repeats what defensive driving is all about.

"Your job is to do everything you can to prevent that accident."

Forget about blame. That's a subject that somes up when it's often too late.

"We're not talking about the law but driving to save our skins."

A stream of traffic is like a piece of music, says Mr. Thornton. It has a rhythm, a tempo, and it's up to you to keep to it. That means not too fast, not too slow.

There are some obvious things to remember in the art of passing.

Know your car's capabilities. They're not limitless, any more than yours are.

If there isn't a margin for the unexpected, don't pass. At 60 miles an hour you need half a mile to pass a car and get out of the path of another auto approaching at the same speed.

AN AMBUSH

The defensive driver lifts his foot off the accelerator and puts it lightly on the brake as he approaches any intersection.

It could give him that two-second edge which will keep him intact.

FORMULA

There's a four-point formula to keep in mind for making a turn at an intersection know, slow, show, go.

Know what you're going to do before you arrive, slow down gradually for the benefit of the driver behind, show him what's up by signalling your intentions. And go only when the path is clear.

Simple, isn't it? But how many drivers have you seen who are simpler still by ignoring part of it?

Cooking Can Be Fun — By Mary Moore

ONE CHICKEN GOES A LONG WAY

One chicken went a long way to provide our weekend meals. I made chicken soup, tea biscuits (using chicken fat) and chicken chop suey.

Today I will give you two of these recipes.

HOME-MADE CHICKEN SOUP (Serves 6)

One 3¼-lb. chicken, 8 cups hot water, 1 bay leaf, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 chicken oxo cubes, 2 medium carrots cut into ¼" dice, 2 tablespoons raw long grain rice, 1 small onion, chopped finely; ¾ cup finely chopped celery, including some leaves; 2 cups fine noodles (tamped down), 1 cup canned tomatoes (or tomato juice), 2 cups water (second amount).

Moore

In soup pot cover chicken with hot water, add bay leaf, salt and chicken oxo cubes and simmer, covered, 3 hours, removing bay leaf after first half-hour and turning chicken at halftime.

Lift chicken to utility tray. Strain and chill broth. As soon as you can handle it, slip off all bones and skin. Chill chicken meat. I had 3 cups.

Skim all fat from broth. (I had 6 cups broth.) Reserve fat and chill it for biscuits later.

Return broth to heat and add carrots, rice, onion, celery, noodles and tomatoes and 1 cup of the chopped chicken meat, and simmer, covered, 1 hour. (Reserve remaining 2 cups chicken meat for chicken chop suey.) Taste. Mine was too thick and rich so I added 2 cups hot water, reheated it and it was perfect for a main course for lunch served with:

TEA BISCUITS SUPREME (using chicken fat)

Two cups stirred but not sifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon cream of tartar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, ½ cup hardened chicken fat (or butter or margarine or good quality shortening or combination), ⅔ cup milk.

Sift together into mixing bowl the flour, baking powder, cream of tartar, salt and sugar. Cut in chicken fat with pastry blender until size of peas. Add milk all at once and quickly stir in.

Turn out onto floured board, pat smoothly to ¾" thickness and cut out with 2" floured cutter. Bake on ungreased baking sheet at 450 deg. Fahr. for 10 min. Unsurpassable.

A New You

by Emily Wilkens

Many readers who travel a great deal have problems when they are away from home. These tips for trips should come in handy for your excursions, too.

DEAR EMILY WILKENS: BREAKFAST BREAK

I am a very early riser and love my cup of tea when I awaken at 6 a.m. Usually, room service is not available at that hour. And when I'm a house guest I don't like to disturb the family at that hour by puttering around in a strange kitchen. Have you any suggestions to solve my dilemma?

F.S.

In these days of convenience foods and handy gadgets, it isn't necessary to trouble a soul when you awaken at "dawn." Simply take along a little "care" package (self-care, that is) consisting of a cup and saucer, a spoon, a few tea bags, individual packets of sugar, dried "cream" (if you wish) and even a few biscuits.

Invest in one of the small water-coil heaters which can simply be plugged into any outlet. All you do is put the coil into a cup and you have boiling water in a jiffy.

Actually, these heaters come with a cup in a zipper case large enough to include the rest of your emergency breakfast supplies.

SNACK TRAP

I think my problem is unsolvable, but I wanted to ask you about it anyway. Whenever I go on an outing I destroy my diet plans so completely that I return home happy but carrying a guilt complex as a souvenir. It seems unfair to have to worry about your weight while you're trying to have fun. Yet some refreshment stands seem to specialize in all the wrong treats. How can I stay true to my diet without starving or acting like a killjoy?

M.B.

I appreciate your quandary, M.B., but I also suggest you fall back on that old adage: "Where there's a will, there's a way."

Your best bet to avoid holiday heartbreak is to do what the models do—take along your own tasty, tempting snacks. Fresh fruit, cucumber, carrot and (or) celery sticks, tiny cubes of cheese which come ready-wrapped to "go" are typical possibilities. Pack your cache in an attractive basket with a pretty napkin and you'll have the makings of a gourmet "picnic" which can be the envy of your friends. (Better pack extras for them.)

If you feel hesitant about taking along your own treats just remember that Carol Channing carries all her food for every meal with her no matter where she's going.

WASH-WORD

Most hotels don't provide washcloths and I can't see travelling with my favorite loofah—all that dampness to contend with. Any ideas for an effective scrub-up?

C.G.

It does make one unhappy to be confronted with simply a tub and shower, ample cakes of soap, scads of towels—and that's it.

One solution is to fold the very smallest hotel towel as compactly as possible and use it as a washcloth. Or, you could buy those concentrated little pellets which expand into "washcloths" when dampened and are easily discarded after use.

Home-Made Fish Tank Demands New Cement

By Penny Saver

Kids make the darndest things. Since my husband has a bent for carpentry he has finished our children's rooms with custom-made furniture. Of course, they change their needs and their minds every year or so, but since he is always looking for some chore or another, my husband usually manages to fill their demands. One of our sons has a love for fish and his collection soon outgrew his aquarium space. With Saver ingenuity, he decided to make one of his own to fill a certain corner of the room. He had the glass cut exactly to fit, then set about glueing it into shape. It was a fiddly job, requiring patience, a steady hand and an excellent water-proof glue. He swears he will never tackle such a tedious job again. He is proud of his workmanship however, and I am glad he made the tank. Now I can use the remainders of the excellent glue he found to fix the few antique dishes I have that are broken, but too lovely to be discarded.

This glue is $1.49 a tube and is good for glass, ceramic, porcelain, plumbing fixtures—there seems to be no end to the things it will mend. It holds on contact, but is still workable so that pieces can be fitted. This can be very useful on patterned plates and cups that have broken into more than one piece. The glue won't damage paint or varnish—it just wipes away. Heat-resistant, water-resistant and non-flammable, this glue gives a strong, tight seal. It is so strong that items mended with it can be washed in automatic dishwashers. I still find it hard to believe that this cement will hold such long surfaces as the corners of my son's aquarium, but he is confident it will.

This Polish Is a Life-Saver

The coming of spring means the going up of the screens. Since this year my motto is stay ahead of the game, I got my husband going before the bugs and had him move the screen door out of winter storage. What a mess! I immediately—before the door was up and in use—started to clean it with an aluminum polish. This product cleans and protects metals. It removes marks and pits and prevents them from re-forming. It is even good on a painted or enamelled finish. The substance is harmless to hands and non-abrasive. It brings the aluminum to a mirror-like shine and keeps it that way. In Victoria where there is often a fine mist of salt water in the air that tends to corrode metal frames, I find this product very useful. A one pound tin is $2.49.

If you, like me, have high-set rings and brooches that are forever collecting dust and dirt of every description, try the jewel cleaner I have discovered. It includes a small brush that is invaluable for reaching into the intricate depths of a "cage" setting. This cleaner can be used on all but pearls and pasted stones. A six-ounce jar is $1. This cleaner is the best answer I have found to my jewelry problems. I wouldn't be without a jar.

Please call me at 382-3131 if you would like to know where I found these items.

Further Education Work Urged By Provincial IODE Officer

The Provincial Chapter of British Columbia IODE is meeting at the Empress Hotel this week for its 55th annual meeting.

A total of $23,698.31 was reported spent on educational projects by provincial educational secretary, Mrs. J. F. Macintyre. Of this amount, $13,317.51 was used for assistance to secondary and advanced students, $3,527.71 for helping elementary schools, $5,520.19 was spent on special educational work, and $27.90 sent to help schools in the West Indies.

She asked chapters to consider adopting schools in need of help in Newfoundland, Labrador and other far north areas and reported that seven chapters had adopted eight schools to date, spending $206.66 on this work.

Mrs. Macintyre also emphasized the need for more bursaries, scholarships and grants.

Special projects had seen chapters contributing to libraries, donating $1,600 to the University of British Columbia's department of fine arts, and giving gifts to music festivals, art libraries, kindergartens, schools for retarded children and adults, Indian centres and other activities.

As War Memorial convener for B.C., Mrs. Macintyre said that four UBC students have been given $1,600 bursaries. Post-graduate scholarships of $3,000 had been given to Timothy Taylor, Victoria, and Bruce Mitchell, Prince Rupert, who are both studying in England.

The impressive amount of $71,477.40 was spent on the work of her committee reported Mrs. G. L. Bolton, provincial services at home and abroad committee. Institutional services had been assisted to the amount of $7,343.84. Remembrance Day ceremonies had cost $588.22, clothing and bedding valued at $31,491.83 had been donated, food parcels costing $2,781.27 had been given, and recreation projects had been donated a total of $1,382.40. Nursery bags, personal property bags, health kits and other amenities had cost $3,914.63.

Money voted to national, provincial and municipal funds had amounted to $2,946, $973.49 and $845.60 respectively. Eighteen IODE members were in training for civil defence while $14,233.45 had been raised by members who assisted in other organizations' projects. Donations to other groups and projects not listed in her previous summation had seen a further $4,761.78 being spent.

Organizing secretary, Mrs. J. B. McRae, reported a total of four municipal chapters and 87 primary chapters, with a total membership of 1,885, a loss of 28 members in the past year.

Mrs. C. W. Jaggs, provincial Commonwealth relations secretary, told of assistance given the National Commonwealth Relations Fund, a reception for international students at the University of Victoria and other projects.

Also giving reports were: Provincial Echoes secretary, Mrs. Elsie Lowthian; provincial standard bearer, Mrs. G. F. Seldon; provincial archivist, Mrs. Frank Stead; provincial treasurer, Mrs. C. G. Welbourne; provincial public relations recretary, Mrs. F. L. Middleton; provincial immigration and citizenship secretary, Mrs. Stan James; provincial world affairs secretary, Mrs. J. A. Dunn, and provincial chapter liaison officer to the Victoria League for Commonwealth Friendship, Mrs. E. O. DuVernet.

In her report, Mrs. K. H. Bancroft, chairman of the Emmerson House committee, spoke on facilities of the residence which houses eight elderly women, and is staffed with a housekeeper and an assistant.

Mrs. H. W. Godwin, chairman of the Jessie R. Burke Memorial Cancer Fund, reported a total of $1,985.07 with $367.69 being earmarked for the research fund.

PIONEERING KNOWS NO DATE LINES

The rich heritage handed down by Canada's pioneer women was vividly outlined by provincial archivist Willard Ireland when he spoke at the annual dinner meeting of the Provincial Chapter of British Columbia IODE, held in the Empress Hotel's ballroom, Tuesday evening.

The speaker stressed that pioneering was not restricted to any time, and that each age produced its own visionaries and builders.

"Beginning in 1787 when the first white woman came to Vancouver Island there have always been women who have been outstanding in their contributions to both home and community," he said.

"When Frances Hornby Barkley set out on her honeymoon trip in 1787 it was no ordinary holiday. The voyage in a small ship took months and saw her warding off the unwanted attentions of the first mate, nursing a sick husband and enduring all the tribulations such a journey entails."

He talked about Mrs. William Fraser Tolmie who, British-born, was determined that her children would be also. This determination saw her taking a canoe trip across the Strait of Juan de Fuca from her home near Tacoma each time a child was due.

Another mother to receive accolades from the speaker was Mrs. Ernest Halliday, who in 1895 travelled from Ontario with her two small children, husband and brother-in-law, so that her husband could join the gold rush in British Columbia.

"When the party came to the Rockies they were unable to use their ox-cart so they walked. The trip from Edmonton took two months and they arrived at Kamloops just in time for Mrs. Halliday to bear her third child."

The speaker was introduced by provincial president Mrs. H. G. Heyworth, Vancouver, and thanked by provincial first vice-president Mrs. H. K. Bancroft, also of Vancouver.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Menstruation Not Illness, Perfectly Natural Process

How strange it seems that so little communication could possibly exist between a mother and a daughter. Yet, the situation described in the following letter is not unusual.

Lowman

"Dear Mrs. Lowman,

I am 16 years old and I'm one of those girls who never had a "mother-daughter" talk.

Although I am already experiencing "womanhood" I wish you would write something in your column about the menstrual period. I am sure there are a lot of girls like me who would appreciate this."

The menstrual period is not an illness but a perfectly natural process. Individuals vary in the length of the cycles, but the average is every 28 days. Some girls and women have their periods every three weeks while some only once every five weeks.

Slight differences from the average should not cause worry. However, any sudden big change should be investigated medically. Infection, anemia, or glandular disorders may be responsible for cessation of the periods.

Most girls mature between the ages of 12 to 16, although here also individuals vary. If the delay is extreme, medical advice should be sought.

Unless there is some special condition, girls and women should not have to change their activities to any great extent. Violent exercise and sports should be avoided the first few days. Bathing can be continued as usual.

It is a good idea to give yourself slightly more rest than usual. The majority of women have little discomfort. If there is severe pain, a doctor should be consulted.

The following exercise has been recommended for menstrual cramps. Lie on the floor on your back. Bend both knees and place the feet flat on the floor. Keep your hips and back on the floor as you push up slowly toward the ceiling with your abdominal muscles. Slowly pull the muscles down toward your backbone. Continue with a very slow pumping motion, letting the abdominal muscles do all of the work.

To learn more about how to treat your body during the menstrual period, send for my free leaflet, "The Menstrual Period." To obtain your copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Parties Planned For Convention

OTTAWA (CP) — Women delegates and wives of delegates to the Liberal leadership convention, which begins Thursday, will have their share of the limelight.

Every candidate is preparing some social functions for delegates and their husbands or wives. Like Mr. and Mrs. Eric Kierans, several will hold these events Thursday evening.

Most of the main contenders or their wives plan special receptions just for women Friday.

Probably a "must" for many will be a reception and question period Justice Minister Trudeau is to hold at the National Library.

Other highlights include a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Paul Martin, followed by an address by her husband and a fashion show, and a reception at the elegant Parliamentary Restaurant by Mrs J. J. Greene.

WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

England's Changing Scene To Be Subject of Speech

Mrs. Estelle Serpell will be here from London, England, on Monday and will be guest speaker when the Women's Canadian Club meets at the McPherson Playhouse at 2:30 p.m. Her topic will be "England's Changing Social Scene Depicted in the Modern Novel."

Mrs. Serpell went to England in 1928 after spending the first 10 years of her life on Vancouver Island. Married to a British government official, Mrs. Serpell is a tutor for the University of London's department of extra-mural studies, where she conducts a diploma course in English literature. For more than 10 years, she has held a lectureship at the City Literary Institute, an adult education institute under the Inner London Education Authority.

Mrs. Serpell has also worked as a tutor for the British Council, and, from 1959 to 1962, was associate professor at Nanyang University in Singapore. While there, she also wrote radio scripts for the education program.

Since returning to Britain, she has given many talks on life in the Far East, using her own collection of colored slides for illustrations.

The Serpells have a daughter, whose husband is an army officer, and a son who is doing psychology research and lecturing at the newly-founded University of Zambia. His wife teaches in a government school. Mrs. Serpell recently spent five weeks visiting her son and daughter-in-law.

PRESENT GIFT TO HIS HONOR AT CEREMONY

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. Pearkes received a surprise when they attended opening ceremonies of the 5th annual meeting of the Provincial Chapter of British Columbia IODE at the Empress Hotel. The surprise took the form of a gift, an exquisitely designed salad bowl and servers.

Sooner or later, that day comes, the day when a woman feels she's changing. It's not a good feeling either. And she could use a good old-fashioned medicine then.

Could be you feel a little edgy, or maybe cross. You might even have what we call hot flashes and feel sad and slightly off-balance.

Whatever you feel, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle ingredients that work to give you a better sense of well-being. A sense of well-being you might lose when you start changing.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Loneliness — Disease That Can Be Cured

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is dead, and I am all alone in the world. Loneliness is like a cancer, only it's worse. It doesn't kill you, it just gnaws at the mind until concentration and constructive thinking are permanently crippled.

When my husband was living, we visited lonely people and often took them for rides, to the movies and out for a meal. But now that I am alone, no one visits me. And no one ever offers to take me anywhere. Married people don't care. They have each other. Sundays are torture. They're endless.

I am treated worse than a criminal. Perhaps if I were a criminal, some saintly person from a church group would call on me and try to save my "soul."

I attend church, but the church has paid no attention to me in my loneliness. I am not rich, neither am I poor. I am not beautiful, nor am I ugly. I'm too old to work steady at a job, and I'm too young to die.

I know there is no solution to my loneliness, but perhaps it will help to write it down. Thank you.

LONELY IN ATLANTA

DEAR LONELY: Your letter reveals an intelligent, sensitive woma , plagued by self-pity and preoccupied with her "loneliness." If you are able to walk, talk, hear, and see, and are not dependent upon charity, you are better off than some.

A sure cure for the blues is to find someone less fortunate than yourself, and do something for that person. (You won't have to look far.) There are lonely people to visit, blind folks to read to and write for. The only way to "get" is by giving. Try it, and if you are still inclined to agonize over your solitude, the pain could be self-inflicted.

DEAR ABBY: There is a handsome new teller at the bank where I deposit the company checks, and he has me so fluttered I hardly know what I'm doing.

This morning after I made my deposit, he touched my hand when he gave me my receipt, and I nearly fainted. He has the most beautiful smile, Abby, and he seems to light up when he sees me coming. One of the girls who works at the bank said he asked her if I was engaged or going with somebody, so he must be interested in me. How can I let him know I would like to know him better without being too forward?

DEPOSITOR

DEAR DEPOSITOR: Just keep making those deposits, and watch the interest grow.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were discussing a letter we had read in your column. It was from a woman who complained because when she and her children said "grace" at the table and thanked God for their food, her husband said, "Don't thank God—thank me. I'm the one who earned the money to put the food on this table!" We joked about it and forgot the incident. But our 5-year-old son didn't forget.

At dinner when he said the blessing, first he said, "Thank you, daddy, for my food," Then he bowed his head and said "and thank you, God, for my daddy."

FARMER'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: It was with a great deal of interest that I read the letter in your column from the teen-aged girl who bemoaned the age-old tradition that gives the male the privilege of asking the girl for a date instead of vice versa.

As a high school teacher for the last 19 years I have had an opportunity to observe the situation from close range. I have taken pools and discovered that approximately 10 per cent of my girl students know that it is the girl's place to speak to the boy first. Boys tell me that 99 out of 100 girls will walk past them in the halls without so much as a "hi." No boy would consider the girl "forward" were she to speak first. The girl who is friendly enough to say "hi" first is usually the one who comes to mind when he wants a date for that special occasion.

J. C.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J. L.: Keep quiet. No man wants an honest opinion of a horse after he's bought it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO G. K.: Hair, like money, is never very important to the man who has plenty of it.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069 and enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EASTER BUNNY GOES SHOPPING

Linda Darling, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Darling of Greenridge Crescent gets in a little early Easter shopping. Judging by the grin on her face, our local Bunny has earmarked this jumbo-sized egg for her own annual celebration. (Bill Halkett).

Candidates Need Women

OTTAWA (CP) — Women are the backbone of a candidate's campaign, says Mrs. B. E. MacDonald, president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada.

"It is the women who do so much voluntary work. They don't mind doing the groundwork . . . going from house to house or preparing campaign literature.

'I just don't know how candidates could run a campaign without the women."

Mrs. MacDonald estimates that at least 300 delegates to the Liberal leadership convention, which begins Thursday, will be women.

There has been a definite increase in women's interest in politics in recent years, she says. "The 1965 election started them in real earnest."

$150,000 Monthly Prizes In Montreal Tax Lottery

Montreal's resourceful Mayor Jean Drapeau was still refusing to be pinned down Tuesday night after announcing his startling new lucky-chance scheme for raising municipal revenues without hoisting taxes.

Whatever you call it, the aim of the game for the city is a budget-balancing $28,000,000 and for players a chance at a cool $100,000 first prize on a $2 "donation."

Montreal's budget for 1968-69 amounts to a record $283,473,992, much of it to go into renewal of blighted urban areas, water purification plants and extension of the subway.

It represents a rise of $32,875,390 over last year's total expenditure and, said the mayor, despite some minor revenue increases would have meant a 20-per-cent hike in municipal taxes without the lottery-like scheme.

FIRST FOR A CITY?

His "exercise of chance" is the first of its kind in Canada and perhaps a first in North America for a municipality. The states of New York and New Hampshire operate lotteries based on horse racing to help pay for education.

Montreal's game is intended to stay within Canadian law by requiring the 151 winners each month to answer a "skill-testing question,"—an "easy one," Mr. Drapeau explained with a twinkle.

In addition to the top $100,000 prize for the holder of the lucky receipt for his donation, there will be 30 prizes of $1,000 each, 20 prizes of $500 and 100 prizes of $100, for a total $150,000 giveaway each month.

"There are absolutely no legal difficulties attached to this institution," the mayor said.

In Ottawa, meonwhile, a spokesman for the justice department agreed, saying the department had no plans at present for challenging the idea.

Donation blanks to get in the game will be printed in major newspapers and magazines across North America before the first drawing May 20. There will be no sales.

AS MANY AS WISH

Mr. Drapeau said his "voluntary taxpayers" will be allowed to send in as many $2 contributions each as they wish.

"And by the way, the millions of visitors we expect to come and see Man and His World on the Expo site this year will certainly be voluntary contributors."

It all added up to a light-hearted scheme aimed at curtailing taxes and boosting the economy of the Montreal area, which the mayor said, is suffering of late from a climate of "cautious austerity."

"Our intention is not to emphasize the climate of austerity which may prove damaging psychologically and emotionally."

If the game, expected to cost $4,000,000 a year to operate, didn't bring in expected revenues, then new taxes would be proposed.

But, in any case, such new taxes would be considerably less than the 20-per-cent raise that originally seemed a certainty.

In a similar effort to raise money, New York State started a lottery last June, but sale of the $1 tickets produced less than one-third of the $30,000,000-a-month gross that was anticipated.

New Hampshire started a state lottery in 1964, but as with New York's, it has not produced as much revenue as expected.

CANDIDATES SHIFT INTO HIGH GEAR

Headquarters 'Beehive of Activity'

OTTAWA (CP) — Paint, signs, buttons, uniforms and paper, probably tons of it, are being marshalled into the hoopla of the convention that will choose a successor to Prime Minister Pearson as national Liberal leader.

Campaign headquarters are operating in high gear as workers toil to make their man a winner at the three-day convention, which officially starts Thursday at Ottawa's Civic Centre.

Although the aims are the same, candidates' headquarters vary in size and sometimes in activity.

Both Transport Minister Hellyer and John Turner, the consumer affairs minister, moved their headquarters Tuesday afternoon to hotels where they can be nearer delegates. Others were moving their information centres to Lansdowne Park, where the Civic Centre is located.

Agriculture Minister Greene's quarters were decked with campaign signs and paint, mostly green, was everywhere.

Robert Winters' offices were filled with workers preparing material for convention delegates. It was the same at Health Minister MacEachen's centre-town quarters.

Headquarters for Justice Minister Trudeau resembled a wargames operational centre. Aides seemed to be in constant motion. A uniformed security guard scrutinized persons entering the upstairs areas of the headquarters.

Mr. Martin appeared to be the only candidate who would not be serving drinks. One reason was the "terrific backlash" over drinking at last September's Conservative leadership convention, a Martin aide said.

But not Mr. Winters. A supporter said he has "another gimmick in mind." Demonstrations would be aimed at "creating a presence" for the former trade minister throughout the capital. Drinks would be available, but only during "cocktail hours."

MEETINGS CALENDAR

Optimist Club of Victoria, April 10, 6:30 p.m., Dominion Hotel.

Ex-Service Women's Branch No. 182, Royal Canadian Legion, Thursday at 8 p.m., legion hall, 1616 Blanshard St.

Second Canadian Mounted Rifles, Friday, 8 p.m., Amputation Association Hall. Speaker Lieutenant-Governor Major General George Pearkes, V.C.

Ladies' Auxiliary to Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada, Thursday at 8 p.m., auditorium, 1001 Wharf St.

SS Beaver Kiwanis, Thursday, 7:30 a.m., Strathcona Hotel, Jack Batey on Scouting.

'Fantastic' Shot in Arm For Business

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal Party's leadership convention is likely to mean a $1,500,000 boost to retail trade in Ottawa, and untold more commercial business, civic authorities say.

Gerald M. Geldert, director of the city's tourist and convention bureau, estimates that each delegate and other convention visitor will spend about $35 a day and stay for perhaps four days for the three-day meeting.

"This is about double the amount that the average summer holiday visitor to Ottawa spends, he said.

"It's just a fantastic shot-in-the-arm for business. It's hard to realize all the benefits a big convention like this brings to the capital."

Grit Hopeful Denies Skipping Hotel Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Lionel Laframboise, a Liberal leadership candidate who is alleged to have left Vancouver without paying a hotel bill, said Tuesday night it's all a misunderstanding or an attempt to blacken his name.

Laframboise arrived here late Tuesday and immediately took out official nomination papers for the convention opening Thursday. He said he was spending the evening rounding up 50 people to sign his nomination papers for the convention opening Thursday.

He denied he had purposely left Vancouver without paying his bills, but said an agent was supposed to have checked him out of the Georgian Towers Hotel. He left hurriedly, he said, because he could not get aboard the flight to Ottawa he originally wanted, and had to take another flight to Edmonton, and then to Ottawa.

Laframboise said it was laughable that he should not have paid $85.10 for a weekend stay when he had spent $84,000 on his campaign so far.

The Elliot Lake, Ont., mine promoter said someone—whom he identified only as "a woman"—had said he hadn't paid a similar bill at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal, but he had not stayed there.

CARELESS DRIVERS

Fined in central court Tuesday for careless driving were:

Splash of Color Greeting Delegates Arriving in Ottawa

Mostly university students, they are out to greet the delegates with open arms and fists full of campaign literature and lapel buttons. They wait at the airport, the railway station and at hospitality suites throughout downtown hotels.

They are rivalled by the swinging orange of the Trudeau troops. The young women wear orange-and-white mini-dresses with matching berets. The men have white turtleneck sweaters, orange vests and black trousers.

IN GAELIC, TOO

Transport Minister Hellyer has cheer-leaders in white sweaters, red skirts and white boots.

A novel touch is given the MacEachen volunteers, many from Nova Scotia, by the trilingual identification badges on their blue-and-gold outfits —English, French and Gaelic.

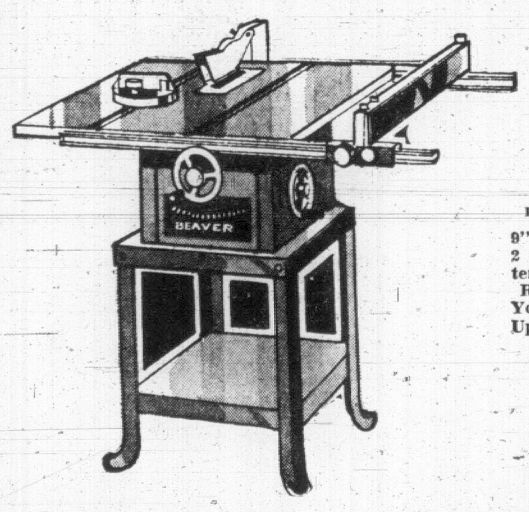

The Kierans key to Canada is worn by University of Ottawa and Queen's University co-eds on their short, flared, navy-blue dresses.

Junior Orchestra Brings Numbers to Stylish Finish

By BERYL PROUDMAN

The Greater Victoria Schools' Junior Orchestra, which played Tuesday night under the direction of Bernard Rain, brought every number they played to a well-executed, stylish finish.

No matter what difficulties they had encountered en route, they played the last bars of each number together, in tune and with a fine flourish.

In commenting on the achievement of student string-players, it cannot be stressed too much how narrow is the margin of error they can get away with undetected.

Whereas fractional intonation slips galore pass almost unnoticed in a band performance, string-players making the smallest miscalculation can soon reduce a lovely melody to an unrecognizable nightmare cacophony.

Hours of concentrated study under able direction allowed the players in the Junior Orchestra to overcome, to a great extent, the hazardous nature of their instruments

The standard of performance was high and most pieces attractive to hear.

With apparent understanding of the style of composers as different as Mozart, Humperdinck and Pyle the students changed the mood and rhythm of their playing with commendable ease. The playing of works by Mozart and Telemann obviously gave them far greater insight into the construction of classical compositions than academic analysis could ever have done.

Belisario's Perpetual Motion not only allowed several soloists to shine in a well-arranged solo passage but gave the orchestra a fine opportunity for providing a well-sustained, balanced accompaniment.

The transitional passages in the selections from Hansel and Gretel proved excellent exercises in following the conductor into contrasted sections, and showed how much easier it is to play lively rhythmic numbers than those in which the slow-drawn bow demands impeccable control.

Lorna Griffiths' choir from Monterey Elementary School should only be praised in superlatives. This is, without doubt, one of the finest elementary school choirs I have ever heard. Their tone was true and sweet, and their diction so crystal clear that every word could be heard from the back of the auditorium.

Of the many songs they sang, Schubert's Trout was, perhaps, the mast beautifully controlled but it is invidious to choose one song when all were so good. The students obviously enjoyed singing and reached their notes and sustained their parts with absolute confidence in themselves and their director.

The Grey Band from Oak Bay Junior Secondary School brought the program to a close. David Dunnet, the director, had allowed the students to choose four well-contrasted numbers from their regular band program.

John Kinyon's Morning Bells, produced a pleasing musical unity and the Frere Jacque round made full use of the different sections

NURSING is their business but — There's No Biz Like Show Biz proclaims the Student Nurses' Society of Royal Jubilee Hospital. It's the title of a show the student nurses are putting on in the nurses' residence, Richmond Road, April 3, 4 and 5 at 7:30 p.m. Gaily costumed and made up so their best patients won't recognize them are, back, left to right, Janice Cater and Beth Clague; seated, left to right, Cheryl Jones, Kathy Nicholson, Dawn Fenton and Judy Pastill.

Park Honors Pioneer

Broadmead Park will be renamed Horner Park in honor of a Saanich pioneer.

The municipal parks and outdoor recreation committee agreed Tuesday night to recommend the change to council.

The late A. E. Horner, a former Saanich councillor and school board member, gave land for the park in the Shelbourne area on two occasions.

He came to Saanich in 1912 and was a landseape gardener. He died last October at the age of 92.

New Executive Of Red Cross

Did Singer Wear Longjohns With Plunging Neckline?

By ED GOULD

GANGES — George Zukerman, internationally-known bassoonist and oboeist and director of Vancouver's Cassenti Players, will visit here Saturday.

Mr. Zukerman, who has toured widely in Canada and United States, has been invited to perform in Russia during the 1968-69 season.

He will discussion formation of a branch of the Overture Concert Association which has over the years sent performers as far afield as the paper towns of northern Ontario, Inuvik on the Arctic Coast and Keno Hill in the Yukon.

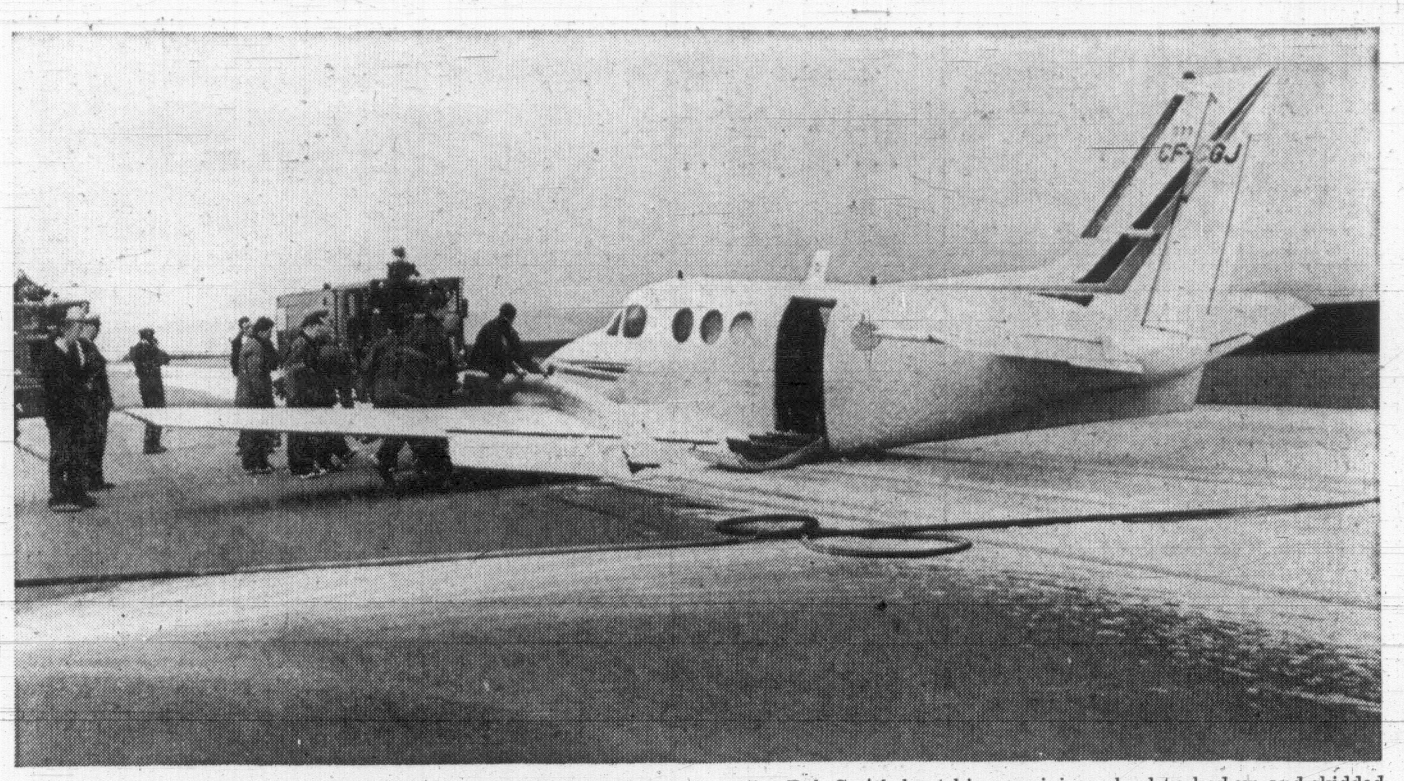

For example, Keno Hill has had Spanish flamenco dancers perform there and Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories heard a performance by Blanche Thebom of the Metropolitan Opera.

Olive Clayton of Scott Point, a former Yellowknife resident, says Miss Thebom wrote a piece about her Yellowknife visit for the New York Times in which she claimed she wore long underwear for the performance.

"If she did, they must have just been the bottoms," Mrs. Clayton said, "either that, or they were fashionably designed with a plunging neckline in the back and front."

The Overture Concert Association's function is to provide residents in outlying areas with the benefits of first class entertainment.

If sufficient members are interested, a series of three concerts will be performed this season.

FOAMING IN ANGER at unladylike belly-landing, this Department of Transport two-motor Beechcraft nonetheless delivered its pilot and three passengers to safety Monday after losing a wheel on take-off at Port Hardy. The foam actually was spread on runway by Comox airmen at Canadian Armed Forces base. Pilot Bob Smith kept his remaining wheel tucked up and skidded the plane through 1,500 feet of the fire-quenching foam before stopping. Damage to plane may reach $50,000—but it carried about $500,000 in electronic equipment, so loss was minimal. (Solly Studios)

'We're Still Up Against Tremendous Odds'—CLA

By DON DINGWALL

DUNCAN — The Christian worker is fighting for the right to express his opinions, Harry Antonides, Western Canada representative of the Christian Labor Association, said here Tuesday.

"We want to keep labor unions from becoming a monolithic structure completely controlled by secularism," he told a meeting of Cowichan Ministerial Association.

Mr. Antonides said the CLA, established in 1952, now has a membership of more than 3,000 and acts for 55 groups of employees in B.C., Alberta and Ontario.

'POWER-HUNGRRY'

He said te CLA is up against other unions who take a "power-hungry" view of their situation.

"We're still up against tremendous odds. We ran up against labor boards which ruled out our applications for certification on the grounds that our commitment to the Christian faith made us discriminatory.

"If this had been left unchallenged, it would have meant the end of much Christian action in public life. But such a ruling was appealed in Ontario and our position was upheld."

Mr. Antonides said that, in practice, there is no Canadian bill of rights which gives protection for men in the labor movement.

'GREAT EVIL'

"This is one of the greatest evils. We have had several cases where big unions have boycotted us and threatened picket lines against us, and this has happened.

"We have a foot on the ground and, at the end of this month, a boycott case is to be tested in Supreme Court. It will decide whether or not we have rights or other unions can ignore our organization and destroy our membership's right to belong to the CLA.

"It is not just two unions fighting over power, but the Christian worker fighting for his right to express his opinions."

BIG IMPACT

Mr. Antonides said he was not suggesting all labor organizations are Marxist, but Communist theories had a great impact and showed in the writings and speeches of North American labor leaders.

He said Christians are all too ready to compromise and make a difference between the spiritual and the natural.

"Christians have allowed their faith to be relegated to a private sector of their lives. Most Christians do not let their faith speak out on the subjects of industry and labor."

'I'm in Paradise,' N. Saanich Motto

North Saanich has tentatively chosen an Indian word for the motto in its new coat-of-arms.

And its unlikely anyone will object, in view of its meaning.

The word is Eetsun-Hunnumut, meaning I'm at home or in-paradise.

The coat-of-arms designed by Prof. A. L. C. Atkinson, an authority on the subject of heraldry, has won the admiration of council by its artistic beauty.

The crest on top consists of a sail between two wings — signifying that North Saanich by air and by sea is the entrance to the Saanich peninsula.

Prof. Atkinson, 10651 Blue Heron Road, has been commended by Dr. Conrad Swan, formerly of Duncan and now of the Royal College of Arms, England, for his designs.

He has designed coats-of-arms for several cities and societies.

RECORD ESTABLISHED IN LUMBER SHIPMENTS

CHEMAINUS—A record 60,952,335 board feet of lumber were shipped from the twin ports of Chemainus and Crofton in March.

Exports for the month also included 1,568,644 feet of logs to Japan, 3,770 tons of plywood, 6,549 tons of newsprint and 18,185 tons of pulp.

SUMMONS JUSTIFIED—MAGISTRATE

Official Faces Charge

DUNCAN — Cowichan schools superintendent Arthur Jones will face a charge under the Public Schools Act.

Magistrate Lance Heard ruled Tuesday dismissed high school teacher Kenneth Hasanen had submitted suffiecent evidence to justify a summons being issued.

The section under which the chare is being laid reads: Any person who disturbs, interrupts or disquiets any school . . . or by rude or indecent behaviour or by making a noise is guilty of an offence and is liable to a fine not exceeding $50."

Mr. Hasanen testified regarding a classroom incident subsequent to which he was dimissed by Cowichan school board for misconduct.

Youth Jailed For Having Stolen Watch

DUNCAN — Jack Cleave Winters, 19, will serve nine months' definite and nine months' indeterminate at Oakalla young offenders' unit.

Sentence was imposed by Magistrate Lance Heard Tuesday when Winters appeared on remand. He was previously convicted of possession of stolen goods.

Winters was found in possession of a watch stolen with other goods from Bruning's Lowcost store, Youbou.

HOME GARDEN

10 Varieties Suitable

By HILDA BEASTALL

It appears to be a fact that, in Victoria at least, most of the vegetable gardening is exclusively the work of men in the households.

Hilda

The person responsible for preparing appetizing, nutritious and satisfying food should have a definite voice in selection of kinds and varieties grown, but few women ask questions on this subject.

Take letuce for instance, practically number one item on the list for all gardeners. We have all heard something about fresh green lettuce containing more exxential vitamins and minerals, yet we are content to have a long row of seed sown, and leave it at that.

Some husbands buy a dozen little plants early in spring and consider those to be the limit for their needs. But why limit ourselves to this kind of production, when there are at least 10 varieties of lettuce suitable to local conditions?

New York No. 12 is a fine head variety for the early part of the season before hot days, while Buttercrunch (a Bibb type) is the best of the small, soft-headed kinds. Leaves are crisp yet tender, and the plants will endure hot weather well. Several small sowings of this pays off in a continuous supply of lettuce the family does not refuse.

Two of the leafy colored types of lettuce are Early Prizehead and Ruby Red, both with distinctive flavor that some people call "nutty". These have even more nutrition than plain green, and their pleasing appearance certainly add interest to salad bowls.

The secret, if any there be, to having a continuous supply of fresh lettuce for six months or more, is to sow a pinch of about 20 seeds each week from now on until early August.

This goes on all summer, and requires little more than 12 feet of row space, and not wasted, crowded, useless lettuce.

Depression Can Cause Diarrhea

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Many people write to say that for some time they have been suffering from diarrhea.

Alvarez

Some of them say that they have been given much ineffectual treatment for amebiasis (an infection with a single-celled microscopic and usually tropical parasite). Now they are wondering if the diarrhea could be due to their nervous "storms." And I say yes, it could be due to some worry, fear, strain or unhappiness at home or at the office.

I remember a wealthy banker who because of diarrhea had traveled all over Canada and the United States seeking relief. When I noticed that he seemed to be much too dull and silent to be a banker, and when I could not get much of a history out of him, I turned to his wife and asked her what she thought the trouble was due to. I asked her also to tell me when the man had become so silent and dull and sad-looking.

She said that a tremendous depression had come over him a year before (an inheritance from his mother). Then she said that she would not call the trouble a diarrhea; she said the main trouble was that his mother was insane, in a mental hospital, and this fact worried him terribly and filled him with fear that any day he too would lose his mind.

Every so often when he would go into a "tizzy" of fear, he would run to the toilet and his bowel would empty violently. After that he would be all right for a week or more until his next tizzy. Obviously, his occasional brief spells of diarrhea were due purely to fear, and his main illness was a depression.

Another man like that who looked to me like a typical schizophrenic, when I asked him what he thought his diarrhea was due, he said, "Doctor, if your mother, your aunt and your brother were all in a mental hospital, and you went into a tizzy and got scared to death, wouldn't you get the diarrhea?" And I agreeed that I probably would.

Many a time, when a woman has come complaining of a diarrhea that no one could cure, all I had to do was to ask and to learn of some tragedy in her life, like a very distressing divorce, a dying mother, a psychotic child, or an alcoholic husband.

Practically always, in such a case I have given good relief with the help of a capsule containing Copavin—one-fourth grain of codeine and one-fourth grain of papaverine. One or two of these, perhaps twice a day, soon put an end to the diarrhea. The only sad feature is that most of my brother physicians have a horrible fear of addiction to codeine. This is hard for me to understand because in 62 years of the practice of medicine I have never seen a single person become addicted to codeine.

GAMBLER GETS KNIFE

WARRINGTON, England (Reuters) — Ice cream salesman Eric Wills has agreed to undergo a brain operation to cure him of compulsive gambling. Wills is such a compulsive gambler that he will steal to get money for his bets, a psychiatrist testified in magistrate's court here.

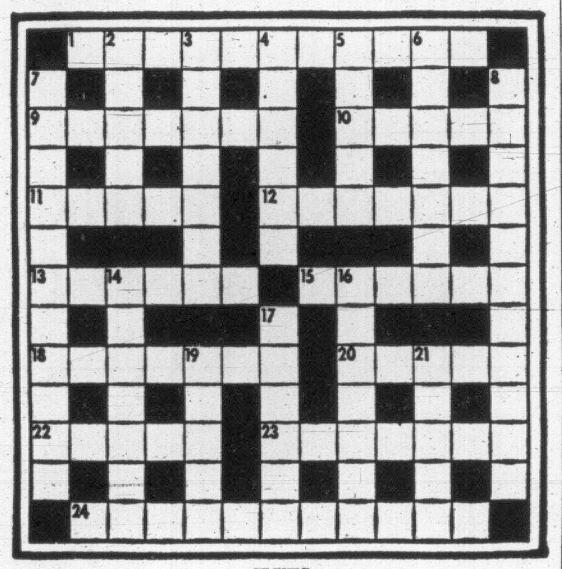

Wills agreed to enter hospital Sunday to see what a leucotomy can do. This surgery involves cutting brain fibres and, if successful, reduces anxiety in the patient.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Charles Yonts, age 10, of Hazard, Kentucky, for his question:

How big does a condor grow?

In the bird world, the great condor holds a record for size. He is not as big as some of our swans and only half as heavy. But swans are rated as water birds because they fly only once in a while. The condor is a bird of the air and the land. And he is without doubt the largest land bird of North America.

There are two condor cousins in the bird world and both of them are whoppers. The South American condor is at home on and above the loftiest peaks of the Andes. The California condor has a last remaining home in the Los Padres National Forest in the Sierra Nevada. The two cousins belong to the Cathartida bird family, a family name that means "cleansers." The zoologists who gave them this name knew just what was right for them, for they are cleansers. They are nature's garbage collectors, Without the help of such birds the fresh outdoors would be strewn with smelly, decaying carcasses.

Condors are slow growing birds and their growing years are threatened by human hunters and trappers as well as the perils of their natural environment. A condor lucky enough to reach his full size may weigh 25 pounds. His huge body may measure 4½ feet from the tip of his fiercely hooked beak to the top of his stiff feathered tail. Standing straight up to his full height, his body just tops the height of a 10-year-old boy. But his greatest measurement shows only when he takes to the air.

A fully grown condor has a wingspread of 10 feet—12 inches more than three full yards. The sea-going albatross measures an extra 1½ feet from tip to tip of his slender wings. But the great condor has the second largest wingspread of any bird in the world. He needs these mighty wings to soar above the highest crags, scanning the landscape with his super-sharp eyes, searching for meaty food and possible foes. He can soar almost five miles above the level of the sea.

Lays One Egg

In spite of his size, nature lovers are worried about the survival of the California condor. The great birds have been hunted and tormented and less than 100 of them are left alive. They are protected in their craggy sanctuary and laws forbid any person to harm them. These rare birds wear glistening dark grey plumage on their backs—but their color scheme is far from drab. Their bald heads are yellow and their bare necks are vivid red. The undersides of their wings are cushioned with feathery white. Mr. California condor wears a black collar of pointed feathers, low around his throat. His South American cousin wears a shiny black coat. His bald neck and head are brilliant red and he wears a downy white neck ruff. A flap of rosy red skin sits on top of his head like a stylish beret.

Condors nest in the high crags and the devoted parents share the family baby-sitting. The South American condor lays two big white eggs. The California condor lays only one pale egg, tinged with bluish green. When the shell is empty, it is big enough to hold more than a half-pint of water. But one egg hatches into only one chick. The rare condor cannot multiply at a great rate because the family can have only one young condor each year.

Andy sends a 14" World Book Globe to Pat Flinn, age 9, of Rowayton, Connecticut, for his question:

What exactly is a working dog.

In one way or another, every dog works for a living. He may be a pampered pooch who warms the heart of his owner with loving affection. He may guard the house or scare rabbits from the garden. Every sensible person knows that whatever he does for a living, a dog is worth his friendly weight in shiny gold. Certain dogs, however, are trained to do special duties. Pointers and setters are born hunters, clever enough to help their human friends to find and capture game animals. Lassie's adorable relatives are talented sheep herding dogs. A bloodhound can track the trail of a lost child.

These special dogs are members of different breeds. At the dog show, the breeds are arranged in classes, depending upon their special talents. The setters belong in the sporting dog class. The working dog class includes the collies and other sheep dogs, the police dogs and the hard-working sled dogs. Altogether you can find 29 different breeds in the class of working dogs.

Operating Cost 'Also Frozen'

Opposition Blasts Minister On Education Bill Amendments

By BRUCE YEMEN

A bill proposing "incredible" amendments to the Public Schools Act was hammered by the opposition and given approval in principle by the government in the legislature Tuesday night.

By a 28-20 vote after four and a half hours of debate, the government overwhelmed opposition MLAs and propelled the controversial bill toward clause by clause committee debate.

The bill revises the provincial formula for assistance to school boards on operating costs.

The vote to give second reading came 1½ hours after an unsuccessful opposition motion to have the bill "hoisted" for six months to give trustees, teachers and PTA members time to register their views.

The move was defeated 29-22 on division.

Opposition criticisms of the bill included:

● It gives "incredible" and "dangerous" discretionary powers to the minister of education and could result in political favoritism in school grants;

● It would "level down" education in B.C., striking at the pace-setters in educational experiment;

● It is "companion legislation" to the school "freeze" on capital costs, aimed at freezing operating costs.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson denied the bill gives him the kind of discretionary authority claimed by the opposition, said it was "plain stupidity" to suggest that over-all education costs would be reduced, let alone held at the current level.

He labelled it "Operation Thumbscrew," said the minister is "smirching the good name of school trustees" and defended the local school board election as a valid test of school policies.

The provincial government is afraid to go directly to the people with its school policies, he said, adding that it would be defeated if it did.

"You're opting for the straitjacket," he said. "You are prepared to drag down the pace-setters in education . . . you're not prepared to set any pace at all."

Mr. Peterson, in a 35-minute reply to opposition criticism, said it was "plain stupidity" to suggest the changes are aimed at holding school costs at their present level or to reduce them.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," he said, adding that education would take "more" provincial revenue in the future.

Advocates 'Rich Men's Schools'

He accused the opposition of advocating "rich men's schools" in wealthy areas and opposing equal education opportunity for all.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby North) led off the attack by condemning the "absolute power" it entrusts to the minister.

She said the current financial formula was working well enough to make it a matter of great concern that the government would introduce "a completely new formula in the dying stages of the session" without any real consultation with school trustees.

She said the new system may lead to lower education standards as a result of ill-advised cost-cutting at both the local and ministerial levels.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) described the bill as "companion legislation to the school freeze . . . this is the freeze on operating costs."

Never Give a 'Blank Cheque'

He said the opposition wanted him to give school boards—"a blank cheque" but he would never do that.

"There is a tendency for some educational authorities to consider that they are the masters of the taxpayers," he said, defending the new provision whereby expenditures over a designated amount would be subject to formal approval or disapproval by local taxpayers.

The minister said opposition advice would mean that education in wealthy communities would be "the best that money could buy" and in the poorer communities it would suffer.

"Do you want rich men's schools in wealthy areas and poor men's schools in poor areas? Is that your policy?" he asked the opposition.

The government is rejecting both the extremes of complete local autonomy and complete centralized control in the new bill, he said.

The principle of equal opportunity in education for all areas is foremost in the new policy, he said.

Opposition Leader Strachan said school boards blazing new educational trails—and spending money to do it—will be "levelled down" by the minister who could become known as "the great leveller."

'Political Needs of Government'

The bill gives the minister power to make arbitrary decisions "reflecting not the needs of education but the political needs of the government."

"That's way we don't like the formula . . . it can be like a yo-yo," he said, calling it "now-you-see-it, now-you-don't" legislation.

Robert Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said the bill gives the minister "incredible discretionary powers" made all the more incredible because the same day (in the early morning hours) he had been asking the house for similarly unacceptable labor powers under Bill 33.

The bill would mean poorer school boards, discourage good men from becoming school trustees and open the door to political favoritism in school grants, he said.

"There could be Dogpatch treatment for some areas," he charged, asking if the school policy would follow the highway policy in which Socred areas seemed to get better roads.

He said the provision that 95 per cent of the previous year's approved expenditures would be the floor for computing the school grants entirely depends on what the minister decides to choose as 100 per cent.

"The old Social Credit tub-thumping arithmetic is coming out in this bill," he charged, asking, "95 per cent of what?"

Tom Berger (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) called the bill "objectionable," and lashed the government for bringing it in so late in the session.

"This bill is weighted with grave consequences for the future of our children," he said.

"This bill is too important to put through now," he added. "We're not going to go along with it."

Several MLAs waved telegrams from school trustees protesting the bill and some were read in the house.

Challenged to name a school board that is spending too much money. Mr. Peterson gave an example of three nameless, adjacent B.C. school districts spending widely varying amounts on a per-pupil basis—$488, $559 and $750.

He said the school board spending the most—the provincial average is $489—was not providing the best standard of education of the three boards.

Local Students Join Summer Science Plan

Two local students will join 35 young scholars from across Canada in the fifth summer science program of the Royal Canadian Institute.

They are William Robert Holmes of Vancouver, a grade 11 student at Brentwood College, and Alastair James Murdock of 3330 Woodburn Ave., in grade 11 at Oak Bay senior secondary.

They will spend five weeks at Lakefield College School at Lakefield, Ont., and the sixth and final week at Carleton University in Ottawa.

The 35 will take part in a program of instruction and discussion in science and mathematics with projects and demonstrations in astronomy, geology, chemistry, physics, psychology, mathematics, statistics and computer science. For six weeks they will have direct contact with outstanding university teachers and research scientists. This year's program will cost about $30,000, most of it paid for by businesses, government, foundations and interested individuals.

The Royal Canadian Institute is Canada's oldest scientific society. Its summer program this year will run July 8 to Aug. 17

MAYOR, PENSIONERS ANGERED BY GRANT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell was not amused Tuesday when town fool Joachim Foikis pranced merrily into council chambers after winning a $3,500 Canada Council grant.

"You might call this the government's mad money," said Mayor Campbell when he learned that the national council had granted money to Foikis, who dresses as a jester and amuses Vancouver's townsfolk.

"An old-age pensioner, who's worked all his life for his country, gets $1,200 a year. Here's a fellow who refuses to work and they give him a $3,500 young-age pension."

The presidents of two senior pensioners' organizations said they would urge their members to make formal protests about the council grant to the town fool.

"It's the most stupid thing I've ever heard of," said President Vincent Yates of the B.C. Old Age Pensioners' Organization.

President Marguerite Smith of the B.C. Senior Citizens' Association added: "We don't like to complain about every little thing but this is going too far."

Yard Convicted On 2 Charges Of Negligence

Yarrows Ltd. was convicted Tuesday of two of three charges laid in the wake of a barge fire last Sept. 7 which killed welder Steve Williams.

The company was fined $500 for permitting hot work to be done where there was likelihood of any flammable substance being present, and a second $500 for failing to ensure work was done without undue risk.

And in his judgment, Magistrate J. A. Byers warned industrial companies should not skimp on safety precautions in order to keep costs competitive.

During the trial, evidence was heard that the fire ripped through the barge after a welder welded a nipple while insulmastic was being sprayed inside the barge.

FLAMMABLE'

Court was told the insulmastic is flammable while being sprayed, but not after it sets.

Seconds after the welder began, flames roared throughout the barge.

Magistrate Byers said although no evidence indicated precautions taken by the company were thought inadequate, "no thought seems to have ever been given to the possibility of an explosive fire caused by the careless conduct of a lone welder.

"There appears to have been no method of ensuring with certainty that there were no welders working close to the spraying operation," he said.

On the second conviction—failure to ensure work was carried out without undue risk—the Magistrate was critical of the fire-fighting equipment at the site

NONE ON FIRE DUTY

"There does not appear to have been any man on fire duty nearby properly equipped and ready to cope with any sudden fire occurring while this highly dangerous spraying was going on.

"The fire extinguishers available on the barge were of no use against a fire of these dimensions. I would hold that the fire precautions taken by the employers for this type of work were quite inadequate," he said.

A third charge, that the company failed to carry out tests to ensure no volatile material was present in a floating compartment, was dismissed.

The magistrate accepted a defence claim the barge did not come within the definition of a compartment.

Commenting on a suggestion spraying should be done at night when no welders or burners are present, Magistrate Byers said "it is to be hoped the task of taking better and more effective precautions is not to be measured by the necessity of keeping shipbuilding costs down to a competitive level."

The three charges were laid against Yarrows by the Workmen's Compensation Board. John Macintyre appeared for the crown and Louis Lindholm for Yarrows.

On March 22, Magistrate William Ostler dismissed a charge of failing to carry out work without undue risk against Yarrows' employee Peter Herold.

Court was told Herold was the electrician who asked a welder to weld the nipple which sparked the conflagration.

3 Homes Qualify For Grants

Welfare Minister Dan Campbell has announced provincial government approval for a capital grant of $29,329 toward the cost of three homes for problem children.

The homes at 1250 Balmoral, 1040 Princess Ave., and 5191 Jersey Road were acquired by the Greater Victoria Family and Children's Service.

Mr. Campbell announced the grant, one of three affecting Vancouver Island, outside the legislature Tuesday.

Another grant of $15,666 was made toward the capital cost of the Comox Valley group living home which will accommodate 12 to 16 youngsters.

Mr. Campbell said the provincial grants amounted to one third of the total acquisition or construction costs for this type of accommodation.

Nanaimo Family Life Centre, which has played a major role in local efforts to co-ordinate available community resources for welfare purposes, gets a $2,000 grant toward operating expenses.

Mr. Campbell said all three grants represented recognition by the government of the value of community involvement in placement services.

Police Watch As Their Car Struck Twice

The driver of a car which twice struck a parked police cruiser was fined $350 in central court Tuesday.

Police said their car — with red light flashing — was parked while they investigated an accident on Blanshard near Belleville.

Ryan came north on Blanshard, struck the police car, backed up and then drove ahead hitting it again.

Court was told the accused was apprehended after he was observed driving south on the centre line of Douglas Street early March 26.

'BOON OR BANE?'

Campaign Explains Uses of Pesticides

Next week is National Wildlife Week and this year it will pose a question for B.C. school children.

The question: "Pesticides—boon or bane?"

In a campaign to set the youngsters thinking on problems of wildlife environment, 7,000 posters and copies of articles will be distributed jointly by the fish and wildlife branch, the B.C. Wildlife Federation and the department of education.

The material made available by the Canadian Wildlife Federation, deals with the problems of toxic chemicals being released into the environment in increasing quantities.

Dr. James Hatter, director of the fish and wildlife branch, reminds youngsters that it might be wrong to accept every new offering of modern technology as representing true progress.

Quoting from one of the articles being distributed, he said: "Pesticides are obviously here to stay. The question is whether we will learn to use them with sufficient wisdom and forbearance to continue to profit from them without doing serious damage to the delicate fabric of the web of life. We humans too are part of that web."

VICTIMS SHOT, BEATEN

Underworld Blamed for Six Slayings in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Police in suburban Pierrefonds Tuesday night discovered the bodies of a man and a woman thought to be the fifth and sixth gangland slayings in the Montreal area in five weeks.

Earlier Tuesday the battered body of Albert Labrie, 33, was found near the banks of the Riviere des Prairies in northend Montreal. Labrie had been beaten, shot several times and run over by a car.

Pierrefonds police were summoned to a private home along the banks of the same river by an anonymous caller who said there were two bodies in the basement of the house.

Police found the bodies of Eric McNally and Susan Clark, both 30, in the basement playroom. McNally had been shot three times, twice in the stomach and once in the head while Miss Clark had been shot twice, once in the stomach and once in the head. Investigating officers said they believed both were underworld murders.

Labrie, police said, was "taken for a ride" and, after being beaten and shot, he attempted to run from his attackers when they drove over him.

On March 20, Roger Lacombe, 36, a parking lot attendant, was found shot through the head in downtown Montreal. He was preparing to leave his job for the night when he was shot, police said.

Raymond Bonefant, 28, was found dead in a stolen car in the Turcotte railway yards in the city's west end Feb. 23 after being shot nearly a dozen times. Later the same day police found a second man, Michel Marleau, 22, who had been pushed from a car near St. Hyacinthe, 30 miles southeast of Montreal after six bullets had been fired into him.

TV AGE

Speed Battles Thought

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

During conversation in a friend's home the other evening, it was suggested that freedom and speed of communication has taken the thought out of what is said.

When the machinery of communications worked much more slowly, people had time to think before they transmitted their thoughts to others.

Today the very speed and quality of modern communications often cut out the possibility of purposeful thinking altogether. As a result what is imparted leaves much to be desired.

The view from the living room that will be made possible by efforts of two television networks. The happening we've been promised. The prediction that through this involvement we are going to be influenced to the point where we will want to vote for or aginast the new Liberal leader on the basis of his television performance.

Someone said it will be top-notch entertainment.

Certainly entertainment, came the answer. But ... what comes after. Are we being educated or are we being brain washed?

On our television screens we'll see a conglomeration of irrelevant close-ups showing candidates, delegates and observers in off-beat poses and conversations.

We'll laugh. We'll applaud. We'll enjoy the show. But when it's all over how much of the serious side of the convention will we remember?

★ ★ ★

The television cameras will bring us so much and in such a rapid sequence of color, noise and confusion there will be little time to absorb any part of the happening or to think of its far-reaching implications.

We'll know the winner. We'll be able to describe his clothes, his mannerisms and the color of his eyes. But will we remember ones point he has made.

Later we'll talk of the confusion, the crowds, the gauche remarks, the hilariously funny incidents. But will we get past this window dressing and recognize from what commentators tell us (much of which will be off-the-cuff) the serious function of the convention.

On Friday afternoon there is to be full television coverage of candidtates' speeches. Those who take time to listen will learn much about these candidates. But will the average citizen give the time to really listen? Or will he be more interested in the cut-ins, flash-ins and close-ups surrounding these speeches and that will present reactions in the crowded Ottawa auditorium.

When the machinery of communications worked more slowly, we did have time to think before we transmitted our thoughts to others. We read more. We absorbed what we read and we remembered.

Seemingly, there is no time now for leisurely reading.

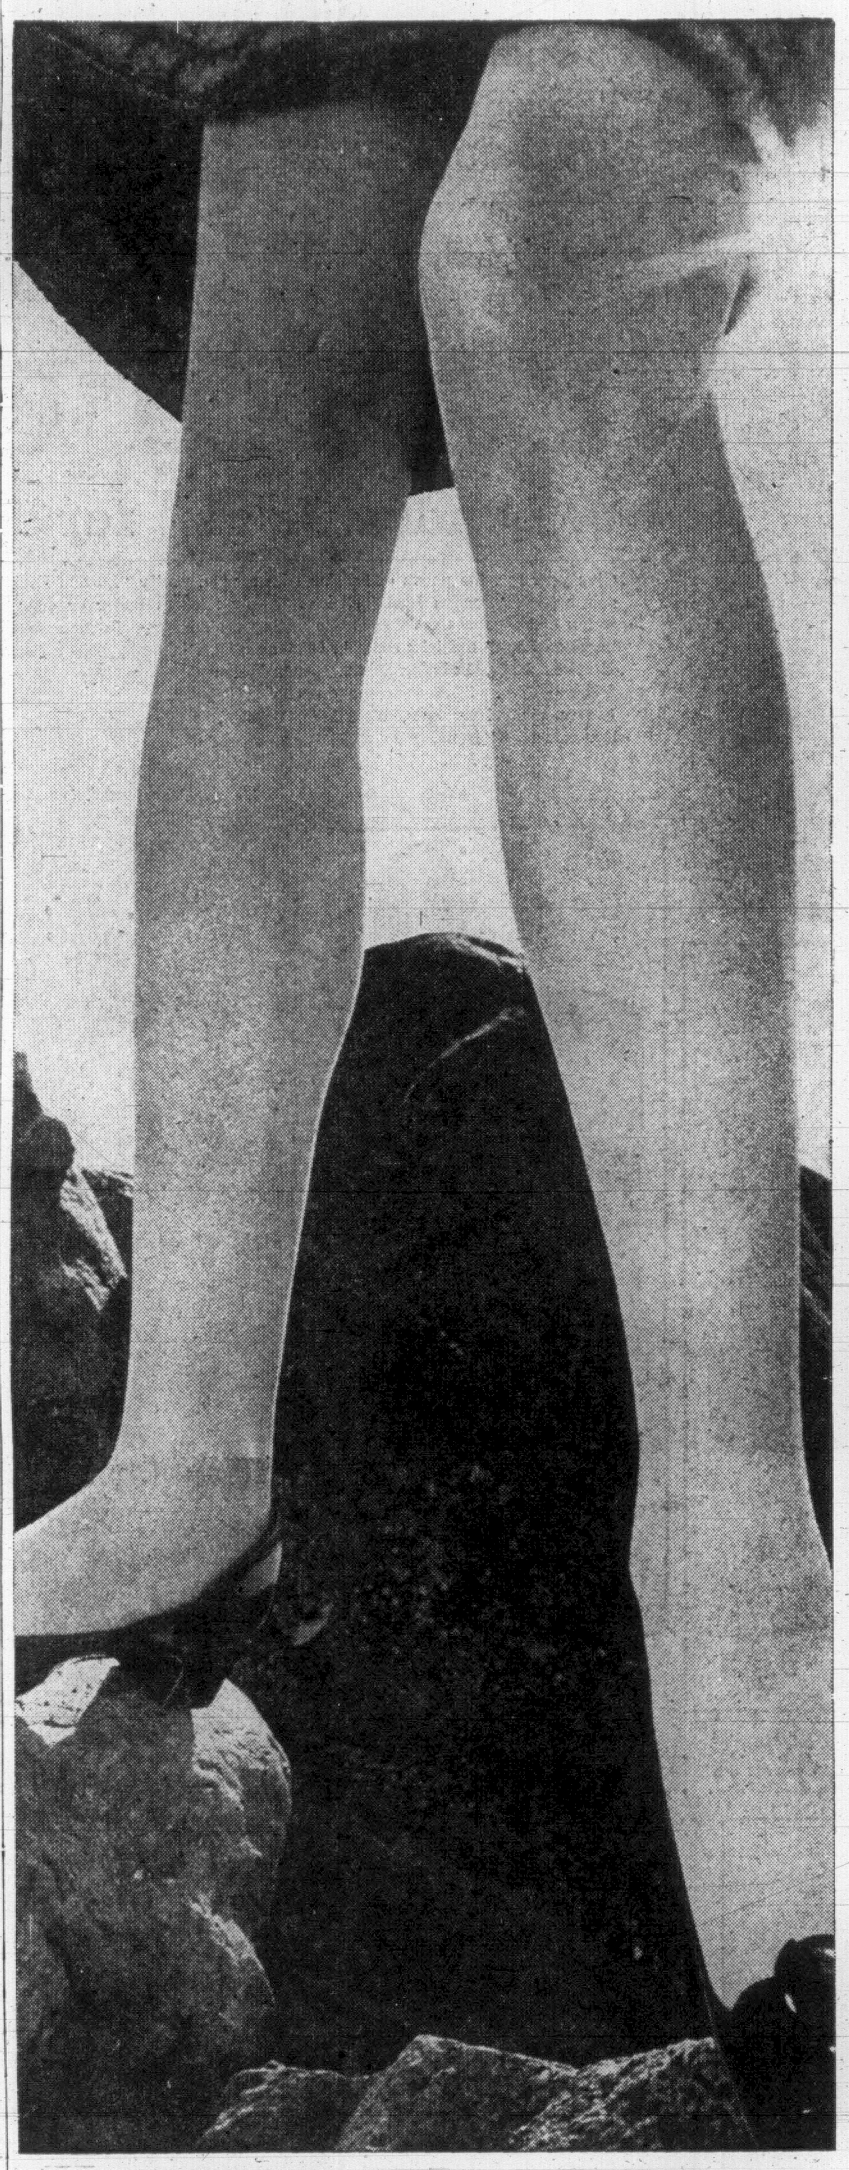

This brings us head-on against the fact that inevitably, with the tremendous strides in electronics and audio-animatronics, in the forseeable future we will have communication centres based in every home. Newspapers will be beamed daily to prepared wall space in those homes and issues of the day will be decided by us — if we still have the power to think for ourselves — from our easy chairs.

We cannot avoid it. We cannot stop it. This type of communication will surely come — perhaps in our own time.

Some would say that to a point it is already here. Otherwise we couldn't have the kind of coverage we'll get for the Liberal convention this weekend. Nor would we be willing to spend hours in front of our television sets just to say we sat in on such a happening.

Sharp Withdraws; Backs Trudeau

First Minister To Drop Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp today withdrew from the Liberal leadership race and called on delegates to the leadership convention to unite behind Justice Minister Trudeau.

Mr Sharp told a news conference his support for Mr. Trudeau is without condition. It was the first withdrawal of a major candidate for Prime Minister Pearson's job.

The finance minister said he had had no conversations with Mr. Trudeau on the leadership issue until he had telephoned him Tuesday about 11:30 p.m. and informed him he was going to withdraw and back the justice minister.

Mr. Sharp said his first-ballot support was better than the polls indicated and that he believes a "high proportion" of his delegates will follow his lead and back Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. Sharp told reporters his conversations with delegates across the country have convinced him that it is Mr. Trudeau who has both broadly-based support and the qualities to lead.

MADE ASESSSMENT

The 57-year-old minister said he had a duty to be realistic in his assessment of his chances for victory in the April 6 balloting. And this assessment had led to his decision to go.

He felt Mr. Trudeau could attract to his cause the kind of people who can give a new vitality, energy and thrust to the political system.

The finance minister's decision followed a late-start campaign which had been interrupted by defeat in the Commons of a government tax bill, necessitating his presence in Ottawa while other candidates toured the country.

Several workers for other candidates attended the news conference in the National Press Building. Workers for former trade minister Winters and Consumer Affairs Minister Turner were conspicuous.

Mr. Sharp said he was taking his action now to release his workers to work for Mr. Trudeau.

He said his campaign workers

Hopefuls Scramble For Votes

The remaining eight serious contenders began a wild scramble to win over Sharp delegates, said to number less than 200.

His withdrawal came just as the great mass of delegates began flooding into the capital for the Thursday start of the convention to pick a successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

The Sharp switch sharply increased the pressure on other leading contenders to make deals with lower-ranked hopefuls to counter the Trudeau campaign, given a substantial boost by Mr. Sharp.

Mr. Sharp called on the 2,450 convention delegates to unite behind Mr. Trudeau as other candidates and their organizations began the all-out convention-eve pitch for the support of the uncommitted.

At the same time there were early indications that Mr. Sharp's delegates were going off in all directions. Each camp was claiming some and some even provided names. It was impossible to say who got most of the Sharp people.

COULD BE RUNAWAY

Most of the deal speculation surrounds External Affairs Minister Martin, running second to Mr. Trudeau for first-ballot support in most polls. There's a common fear among many leading contenders that Mr.

'FLABBERGASTED' BUT 'NO DEAL'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau said today he was "flabbergasted" by Finance Minister Sharp's decision to withdraw from the leadership race and support him.

Trudeau told reporters in Montreal before he left by train for Ottawa shortly after noon, that he was "naturally delighted" with Sharp's decision to support him.

"The decision of Mr. Sharp is a sign of his integrity and generosity — to do this without even consulting me," Trudeau said. "He just phoned me last night saying he was going to do this, whether I liked it or not."

Trudeau denied there had been "a deal" concerning a cabinet post for Sharp if Trudeau wins.

113 Bombing Missions As U.S. Pouring It On

SAIGON (Reuters) — Carrier-based U.S. jets today bombed targets within a mile of the centres of two North Vietnamese cities as the military command again boosted the number of missions flown in the wake of President Johnson's announcement of a partial bombing halt.

A U.S. military spokesman said cargo transfer points one mile south of the centres of both Thanh Hoa and Vinh were blasted by jets streaking in from the Gulf of Tonkin.

The strike near Vinh, 125 miles north of the demilitarized zone, sent a surge of explosions and fires tearing through the storage facility near the transfer point as 500-pound bombs hit, the spokesman said.

He said a truck repair shop just south of Thanh Hoa, 90 miles south of Hanoi, also was bombed.

A total of 113 missions were flown Tuesday, eight more than on Monday and double the average number flown against the panhandle before Johnson's restriction.

STRIKE AIRFIELDS

The spokesman said other planes struck at two airfields, neither with runways suitable for MiG jets. One airfield was 22 miles northwest of Thanh Hoa and the other five miles north of Vinh. Both fields have been attacked before.

The new raids, one the third day after Johnson announced the de-escalation move, followed strikes Tuesday which went almost to the 20th parallel — defined in Washington as the bombing limit in clarification of the president's announcement. The spokesman said carrier-based jets Tuesday bombed a railway siding 12 miles northeast of Thanh Hoa in their northermost strike of the day, about a mile from the 20th parallel.

WIRE BRIEFS

Strike Threat Eased

TORONTO (CP)—The United Auto Workers Union today postponed their strike deadline set for 10:30 a.m. Thursday until 10:30 a.m. Monday as negotiations with the Ford Motor Co. of Canada remained deadlocked.

Priests Leaving

Doctors Found Dead

BONN (Reuters)—Three West German doctors, missing in South Vietnam for about eight weeks have been found dead in a mass grave dug by the Viet Cong, the West German foreign ministry said Wednesday. A spokesman said the rector of Hue University, where the three doctors taught, identified their bodies.

LBJ Meets Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson met today for about an hour each with Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Dem., N.Y. The meetings were separate and the White House had almost nothing to say about either one. (See also Page 3.)

'WE NOW HAVE HOPE' —MARTIN

OTTAWA (UPI) —External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said today new Vietnam peace feelers between Hanoi and Washington bring hopes that "the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Martin, pledged Canada's aid in setting up negotiations and enforcing a "durable and just peace in Vietnam."

"This move in itself is not an end to the war in Vietnam," Martin said, "but for the first time in years we can allow ourselves to hope—even to expect—that we are moving toward peace and that the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Buying Wave Sets Record On Wall St.

NEW YORK — Volume on the New York Stock Exchange today shattered an all-time record that was set only two days ago in the busiest week in the 175-year history of the stock market. (See story Page 14).

Sales poured over the previous record of 17.73 million reached on Monday, the day after President Johnson dramatically decided to de-escalate the bombing of North Vietnam.

The new record followed reports that Hanoi had offered to make a contract with U.S. officials to discuss an "unconditional" end to all bombing in Vietnam and other "acts of war."

The high-speed ticker tape on the New York Stock Exchange ran an unprecedented 47 minutes behind floor trading as volume soared to a record 15,430,000 shares after four hours.

At 2 p.m. the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials showed a gain of 8.03 points at 871.99 after having been up 13.12 at 11:30 a.m.

HOPEFUL STATEMENT BY THANT

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Secretary-General Thant said today he is convinced "meaningful talks" to end the Vietnam war will follow "once all the bombing and other acts of war against North Vietnam are ended."

Thant repeated through a spokesman his belief that such talks "will take place even perhaps within a few days" once the U.S. warlike acts are called off.

He said he was "happy to note" that the initiative leading toward "the promising development of Hanoi's agreement to preliminary talks was taken by President Johnson "in de-escalating the war."

Bombing Dispute Fizzles

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Vietnam's move today in the direction of peace talks took some of the heat out of a row over credibility that some officials thought could provide a propaganda bonanza for North Vietnam.

Administration officials conceded Hanoi could make propaganda profit out of the disclosure that the portion of North Vietnamleft open to air attack under President Johnson's partial bombing ban is actually much bigger than it appeared to be in the president's Sunday night announcement.

Still open to bombing is the area in the southern portion of North Vietnam extending from the demilitarized zone to the 20th parallel. As the crow flies, the distance from the centre of the DMZ to the centre of the 20th parallel is approximately 232 miles. Thus U.S. planes still are allowed to attack 25 per cent of the North's land mass where 10 per cent of the population lives.

CHARGES WAS MISLED

Chairman J. W. Fulbright of the Senate foreign relations committee charged that he was "misled as to the significance" of Johnson's announcement and added:

"The stopping of the bombing is of no consequence and certainly not an inducement for the North to come to the conference table."

Both Senators Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy, candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, were critical of the bombing-area policy.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, defending the administration, pinned responsibility for any misunderstanding on the state department. He said he knew first-hand that Johnson wanted to define the exact line between the bomb-free area and the continuing attack area of North Vietnam.

"He was dissuaded by his diplomatic colleagues," Mansfield told the Senate, "presumably the state department."

'EXCEPT TO NORTH'

In his address Sunday night, Johnson said he had ordered air and naval attacks on North Vietnam stopped "except in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops

Preliminary Negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hanoi said today it is ready to talk about a complete U.S. bombing halt so peace negotiations can begin on Vietnam, and President Johnson said "we are very interested in it."

The response, an apparent shift in Hanoi's position, got top attention in Washington. However, U.S. strategists were unwilling to say immediately whether this means the breakthrough in long-stalled efforts to get peace discussions under way.

Hanoi's announcement came in a Vietnamese-language radio broadcast which was picked up by U.S. monitors, translated and rushed to the White House, state department and other key U.S. agencies.

It followed up Johnson's Sunday order to curtail U.S. bombing of the North as an inducement to the Communists to go to the conference table.

The announcement as translated said:

"It is clear that the U.S. government has not correctly and fully responded to the just demand of the DRV (North Vietnamese) government, of U.S. progressive opinion and of world opinion.

"However, on its part, the DRV government declares its readiness to send its representatives to make contact with U.S. representatives to decide with the U.S. side the unconditional cessation of bombing and all other war acts against the DRV so that talks could begin."

The White House had no immediate comment. Presidential press secretary George Christian said "We do not as yet have a full text" of the Hanoi broadcast and there would be "no comment until we have time to read and consider the text."

However a senator who was with Johnson when he received the report said the president was "very interested in this development."

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) told reporters after a call at the White House that the importance of the Hanoi radio statement is that the North Vietnamese have apparently agreed to some form of discussion without a complete cessation of the U.S. bombing as a precondition.

At Least a Step Forward

The two representatives that Johnson said in his Sunday briadcast would be standing by to join in any peace talks—Ambassadors Averell Harriman and Llewellyn E. Thompson—were in Washington.

Hanoi's response was regarded by U.S. authorities as at least a step forward from North Vietnam's earlier refusal to talk at all.

In Saigon, the English-language Saigon Daily News said President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam will fly to Washington next week for talks with Johnson.

Johnson said Monday he had invited Thieu to visit Washington for discussions on the Vietnam war.

It was still unclear from the initial Hanoi broadcast whether North Vietnam was still sticking to a demand that had been unacceptable to the United States: That there be an unconditional halt to the U.S. air assaults as a pre-condition before any negitiations can be started.

Johnson, in announcing the partial bombing halt in his Sunday night speech, repeated what he has termed his San Antonio formula.

Under this formula, the United States is willing to suspend the bombing if this will lead promptly to productive talks. It also carries an assumption that North Vietnam will not take advantage of the bombing cessation to push its drive against South Vietnam.

The Hanoi broadcast denounced the U.S. "war of aggression" and the continuation of that bombing which is still going on in the southern part of North Vietnam.

And it made no promise about a reduction in North Vietnamese infiltration against the South in reciprocity for the U.S. bombing reduction.

Nonetheless Hanoi's announced willingness even to talk with American envoys about ending the air attacks as a prelude to negotiations apparently caught even her Communist supporters by surprise.

U.S. Opens Offensive To Relieve Khe Sanh

SAIGON (UPI) — Elements of three divisions of U.S. marines, 1st air cavalrymen and South Vietnamese troops opened a major offensive to lift the 74-day-old siege of Khe Sanh today and sent columns of allied tanks and infantrymen to within three miles of the besieged fortress.

The American air cavalrymen carried out a series of leapfrog helicopter assaults in Operations Pegasus against North Vietnamese from the east while U.S. marine tank and other armored weapons moved painfully along east-west Route 9.

The going was slow. At least 17 bridges were knocked out and mines were discovered every 100 yards as the Americans traveled the twisting mountain road that links the 6,000 marines and 1,000 Vietnamese at Khe Sanh with coastal supply areas.

By dusk tonight the column was still about three miles from the besieged base. Military spokesmen said there were upwards of 10,000 North Vietnamese troops surrounding Khe Sanh. Earlier estimates put the figure as high as 20,000.

WIFE CLUNG TO MIRROR DURING 25-MILE RIDE

Tried to Kill Her . . . But He's Worth It

WIGAN, England (CP) — Motorist John Rigby was fined £25 (about $65) in court Tuesday for "carrying a passenger in a dangerous manner"—his determined wife, Olive, perched on the car's front bumper.

Mrs. Rigby, the court learned, feared her husband was leaving her for another woman one wintry night. So when his car pulled away from home near this Lancashire town, Mrs. Rigby dashed out, jumped on the front bumper and clung to the rear-view mirrors on the fenders as the car moved off.

Said Rigby, 46, who had pleaded not guilty:

"I kept putting the brakes at about five miles an hour to try and shake Olive off, but she hung on.

"I decided to give her a ride and drove to Wigan at 25 miles an hour. I couldn't go very fast because she was obstructing my view."

Finally after one mirror had snapped off and both windshield wipers broke as Mrs. Rigby grabbed them, the car ran out of gas. As the couple and the other woman walked homewards, the Rigbys were reconciled.

"I only had a suit on and one shoe," says Mrs. Rigby, 40. "It was freezing cold but it was all worth it to keep John."

BENNETT LEADS 'NO' VOTE

'Tough' Marketing Laws For Oil Firms Sidestepped

By JOHN MIKA

The provincial government juggled a hot potato committee report Tuesday which recommended tough laws to regulate marketing of gasoline.

The laws would protect non-brand independents and prohibit giveaway gimmicks.

It was learned that three Socred backbenchers, led by Cyril Shelford, broke ranks within a closed committee meeting to join five opposition MLAs in pushing through the report.

But Premier Bennett led a majority of his party in shouting an emphatic "no" when committee chariman Herb Capozzi asked the legislautre for unanimous consent to allow adoption of his report without notice.

Mr. Bennett later told reporters time is needed to study the report.

But Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) intends to file notice of motion quickly to bring the issue back to the floor of the house with a proposal that a crown corporation be established as a standby gasoline wholesaler for independents to ensure the two-price system is implemented.

The special committee report received by the legislature said

Arthur Mayse

The theme of the Uvic spring symposium was "Community . . . Is It?" and as a student scout tells the story, one of the dissertations presently became cryptic to an almost terrifying degree.

Then, with the mental fog at its thickest, a strange fellow rose from the Island Hall audience. He wore red and blue motley—a costume that went out with the Divine Right of Kings—and bells tinkled as he shook his antic wand.

"Community indicates communication," he declared, "and we are not communicating here. Therefore I suggest we all go swimming."

The guest who broke up the meeting was Joachim Folkis, Vancouver's self-appointed follower of a profession badly in need of reviving.

Mr. Folkis is an authentic cap-and-bells fool, and possibly the first English-speaking one to delight the simple and prick the pompous since Charles I lost his head to Cromwellian Puritanism.

Now Canada Council has bestowed a $3,500 bursary on him, thereby respectabilizing his art and just possibly destroying the artist.

Having absorbed his share of fortune's buffets, however, he may manage to take the Canada Council recognition in his stride. I hope so, because in spite of his soberside detractors, this is a useful man.

We have any number of small-letter fools around, but you won't catch them dispensing the wares that Fool Folkis scatters so lavishly. He has Mother Goose rhymes for children, and limericks and riddles styled for all ages. He also deals in such explosive capsules of truth as he dispensed to the symposium.

Gentle Kim Folkis possesses a further gift that only a handful of Canadians past and present have been blessed with. Like Greg Clark (no fun-poker more kind) and Stephen Leacock who held a sunlit mirror to our foibles, he makes us laugh at ourselves.

There's no laughter so beneficial, either for an individual or a nation. It can dissolve a quarrel of family-shattering potential before irretrievable words are loosed. It could ease Canada's domestic problems if applied.

There are, of course, those who seem incapable of appreciating what a truly dedicated Fool has to offer his city and his country. Twice in the last hour, I have suffered an ear-bending from readers who were shocked practically out of their wits by the grant.

In their view, that $3,500 should have gone to some worthy cause like helping the handicapped or needy.

This same refrain was sounded fortissimo by Mayor Campbell of Vancouver, a go-getting young man who has gained the world but appears to be in some danger of losing his own soul.

If you happened to catch the Campbell outburst on little sister television, you may have been struck not only by his Vancouver worship's heat, but by his apparent ignorance of Canada Council's reason for existence.

This is not to bestow charity—after all, we have numerous other agencies concerned with basic good works—but to give promising contributors to the humanities and the arts a needed assist.

The Council is not always wise in its selections, some of whom have managed to keep their talents so thoroughly concealed that no rays escape. In the case of Mr. Folkis, though, I think it acted with commendable wisdom.

Perhaps its recognition of a resurrected art will encourage more Fools to assume the cap and bells of an ancient trade.

I doubt there's a city council, ours included, that wouldn't benefit from the presence of an official Fool.

The same for provincial legislatures, where a warning jingle of bells might reduce long, windy speeches to short, terse ones.

Unfortunately, qualified fools are in short supply, and Joachim Folkis can only himself so far. May he t not too much for

All about her, part time sailors are ready for the season, but Zoe is watching for ice floes or making a landfall as she rounds the Horn. Will the natives on that mysterious shore prove friendly? They had better—because Zoe's vessel isn't even in the water yet. This way one doesn't get seasick. (John Philion Photo).

Mother Nature Aggravated, Hurls Water at Tormentors

By PETE LOUDON

For about a year now drivers have been edging testily around men and equipment on Cook just north of Hillside.

If they're dug one hole they've dug 10.

City crews are still there today with a compressor and pump, a ditcher, three trucks and a battery of warning flashers.

Assistant city engineer Bill Jorgensen, who has studied the drainage history of Victoria back to the 1860s, tells the story. As far as the workmen are concerned it began a year or so ago when water began to erupt under tha stands at Little League Park and in private property.

The immediate suggestion was that a water main was leaking.

The first holes went down as the city began re-lining the main. But when that job was finished, the water kept flowing out of the ground. So another series of holes was punched into the hillside.

The diggers found it wasn't the main. It was an underground stream, runoff from the hill which sits under Spencer Castle near where Thre Rise runs up to the Smith's Hill Reservoir. A changed drainage pattern set this underground brook to coursing along the path of the main.

The city is putting in an underground collection pit and new drains and the job has become "a big nuisance." But it's not uncommon where a city grows over an area that nature built with numerous springs, streams, bogs and creeks.

And it's hard to credit, but the Wesley subdivision near Cedar Hill and Bay Street once was a lake covering five to 10 acres.

It was drained by a creek that followed the present route of Haultain, Blackwood, Kings, westward to the harbor, passing under the Bay Street Armoury and exiting under the Crowe Gonnason lands.

Kings Road Ravine as it was called was covered in 60 years ago but there's still a massive pipe running along that route, tall enough for a man to walk in.

Generations of men have shunted nature's drainage paths to suit themselves. But once in a while, nature strikes back as it has with the hidden creek on Cook Street.

'Durable Drunk' Sentences Self To 30-Day Term

Charles Bland, 72, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk in the lobby of the Oxford Hotel, 777 Fort St., Tuesday afternoon.

Police said Bland had been evicted from the hotel in the morning but returned later in the day.

The accused has several previous convictions for similar offences, promption Magistrate Ostler to call him "one of the most durable drunks around."

"If you'll just give me 30 days for this trip," Bland told the Magistrate, "I think I'll pull out for Salt Spring Island when I get out."

"You are one of the few people who regularly sets his own sentence in this court," said Magistrate Ostler good-naturedly.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you tell me where I could get information about salt mining? J.F.

A. The most extensive salt mining in Canada is carried out near Malagash and Amherst in Nova Scotia and near Windsor, Ont. Write to: Honorable D. M. Smith, Minister of Mines, Box 1087 Halifax, Nova Scotia; and Hon. Rene Brunelle, Minister of Mines, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ont. Some salt mining is also carried out in the Prairie Provinces, notably Alberta. For information there write to Hon. A. R. Patrick, Minister of Mines and Minerals, Agriculture Building, Edmonton.

Q. Is there a chess club in the Victoria or Saanich area; if so, who does one contact about joining? D.W.

A. The Victoria City Chess Club meets every Tuesday night at 7:30 in Newstead Hall, 734 Fort St. The president is Charles Birch, 841 Fort St.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

$35 Snatch Made

The money was taken while the clerk's attention was distracted. Police said a youth was in the store at the time.

FLYING TO BIG WILLIAMS LAKE EXERCISE

Soldiers of the First Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, will be chief participants in a mammoth army exercise labelled Panther Leap next week.

The Esquimalt-based battalion will be flown to Williams Lake in Hercules transports from Patricia Bay starting Thursday, April 11. The move will be accomplished in 51 flights leaving every 45 minutes in a round-the-clock operation.

Northwest of Williams Lake, the battalion will be among 1,600 members of the First Canadian Infantry Brigade Group involved in an exercise covering 1,100 square miles.

It will be the largest military exercise in the B.C. interior since the Second World War.

The First Battalion, QORs, was committed to NATO last year as an integral part of the Allied Command Europe Mobile Force (Land). In this role it must be prepared to fly to Northern Europe on short notice should an emergency arise.

"The exercise is designed to prepare the battalion for this role," said Lt. Col. Herbert C. Pitts," the battalion's commanding officer.

The QORs will play the role of friendly soldiers whose task is to settle a simulated dispute between two opposing forces over land rights, cattle grazing and citizenship.

"It will be the first time in the past year that our troops, with all their equipment, including the recently-arrived armored personnel carriers, will be able to fly into an exercise area

"On our arrival at Williams Lake we will immediately assume our operational role and test our ability to move quickly."

The Queen's Own Rifles will be supported by members of Third Field Squadron, Royal Canadian Engineers, from Chilliwack. Return flights to Patricia Bay will begin April 23.

Wage Boost For Firemen In Saanich

Saanich and its 61 fire-fighters have agreed on a new one-year contract, it was announced today.

Settlement avoided arbitration which was indicated last week after talks broke down.

Further meetings were held Monday, Saanich altered its offer and fire-fighters voted approval Tuesday night, said Reeve Hugh Curtis, chairman of the personnel committee.

Average increase for all ranks is 5.25 per cent and the increase for fourth-year fire-fighters and above (38 men) is 6.76 per cent. Saanich earlier offered 6.53 per cent for fourth-year and higher ranks but employees rejected this.

$600 MONTHLY

Second- and third-year fire-fighters will receive $20 a month and there will be no increase for probationary ranks, the first year of service, he said.

A fourth-year fire-fighter now earns $562 a month and will make $600 under the new agreement.

Dean Presents Certificates To Sales Grads

Two students of Victoria Sales and Marketing Executives Club training course were given special recognition as class leaders Tuesday when graduating members went to dinner at the Red Lion Hotel.

Honors went to J. W. Braithwaite, of The Bay, and Linten Queale, of Queal Electronics, members of the first graduating class in the three-year course, offered in association with University of Victoria.

LOOKOUT EXPANSION

Horse, Alpine Trails Planned on Mt. Tolmie

Part of the plan will go to the Capital Improvement District Commission for consideration but most of the work will be done by volunteers, said Coun. Alan Newberry, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

"Work should begin almost immediately," he said. "There are 42 acres and the plan covers it all."

TRAILS

The intent is to develop the park with horse and alpine trails, washrooms similar to those in provincial parks, expansion of the lookout at the top and more parking. He noted the reservoir area has been landscaped.

The capital items, such as washrooms and road widening, will go to CIDC and Saanich will go ahead with groups that have expressed an interest on non-capital items.

He said a horseriding club will develop trails according to the Saanich plan.

"The idea is to introduce a little more greenery into the park," he said.

"It will be extensive although it will take a number of years to bring it to completion. Trees and shrubs will be planted."

Tour Hucksters Face Heave-Ho

Tally-hos and sightseeing buses will vanish from the Causeway after this summer.

A special traffic sub-committee of Victoria city council decided this morning it could find no valid traffic-hazard reasons to ban the buses. But two aldermen and the city manager left no doubt that a total ban on Causeway sightseeing activities would be their recommendation to the city Group B committee and eventually city council.

Traffic engineer Dave Campbell told the committee that road-widening in the vicinity of the Causeway would relieve congestion.

"Parked buses will cause no more trouble than parked cars," he said. "I'm not saying that the buses can operate there forever without causing a traffic problem. But they will not cause a problem for the next two or three years."

The traffic outlook was not enough to satisfy Aldermen Cecil Parrott and committe chairman Hugh Ramsay.

"They (sight-seeing operators) should not be allowed on the Causeway," Ald. Parrot said. "Every year we get dozens and dozeens of letters from visitors and residents complaining about their activities. We should pass on the recommendation that they be banned."

Mr. Young agreed.

After reading a report from the engineering department which catalogued three years of inter-company strife and argument, Mr. Young said he had been forced to arrive at the conclusion "that the time has arrived when we must ask these people to operate from private property."

Prior to that Mr. Young said city staff members are tired of acting as arbitrators between rival bus companies fighting for the best spots on the Causeway.

"At the start they used to fight over a space allocation," he said. "When all the space had been used up we thought things might settle down, but then they started to argue as to who should have what space.

"I think we should advise them this September that this was their last year."

Mr. Campbell suggested a survey be taken this summer of visitors to ascertain their feelings on the Causeway as a huckster's paradise.

"You don't need a survey," answered Mr. Young. 'Just sling a camera over your shoulder as I did last year, look like a tourist, and you'll soon find out what the problem is."

Ald. Ramsay, who following the meeting said he is convinced the tour-barkers must go, told the committee the bus tour and tally-ho people had "only themselves to blame."

"Their own over-promotion has brought this situation about," he said.

Convention Petitions Falling Flat?

The general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Association said today "we've heard nothing further" of petitions being organized to call a special convention.

"I don't anticipate it will be received in our office unless it is a howling success," E. P. O'Connor said in Victoria.

"Nothing has been filed with the association to date."

The petitions began circulating almost a month ago after several militant branches of the association criticized the present leadership for not taking definite action during the two-week ferry strike which ended March 1.

While the association executive responded to a strike call, the ballot was conducted by mail and took a month to complete. The militant branches said simultaneous meetings during the ferry strike could have brought immediate action.

The petitions have to gain 30 per cent approval among the 11,100 BCGEA members before a special convention can be called.

Results of the mail strike vote were disclosed Tuesday.

They showed that 4,690 members supported strike action and 2,133 opposed with about 4,000 members not voting. The association's membership is just under half the 24,000 civil servants in B.C.

The executive took no action to implement the strike vote and has sought a meeting with the cabinet over Bill 33 which specifically outlaws civil service strikes and provides only discretionary, rather than mandatory, binding resolution of unresolved disputes.

Belmont Park Names Royalty

She will be crowned at a May Day royal party and fair to be held at John Stubbs Memorial School Saturday, May 18. Gerry Fifield will be princess; Jo-anne Walker, lady-in-waiting; Susan Forrest, flower girl, and Michael Lazaruk, page boy.

All are students at John Stubbs School.

'It's Not Us' Bunn Replies To Peterson

Education Minister Peterson wasn't referring to Greater Victoria school district when he related cost figures in the legislature Tuesday, chairman Peter Bunn said today.

"When Peterson starts giving figures and doesn't attach names to figures, other people do," he said.

Mr. Bunn referred to costs per pupil in three adjoining school districts, given by Mr. Peterson at $488, $559 and $750. The minister noted that the standard of education was lowest in the district with the highest cost.

THE OTHER THREE?

"People could easily read into the minister's statement that the districts are Sooke, Saanich and Victoria."

Last year the cost per pupil in this district was $511, "quite a reasonable cost relative to the figures mentioned," Mr. Bunn said.

Part of the value obtained in this district for "reasonably progressive education" is spent on two "highly trained social workers and a school psychologist, for example," which are not common in all districts.

Why Risk Blood, Sweat, Tears For Few Seconds?

How many cars do you drive past every day?

Each one represents a potential accident—involving you. But there are proven techniques for reducing the odds. They are detailed in a defensive driving course being conducted by the Institute of Adult Studies. You can enroll in the next course, begnning April 23, by phoning 385-1411. Fee is $8. In this article Times reporter Don Vipond details some of the tips in the third of the four-lesson course.

By DON VIPOND

When you study defensive driving you learn it's a lot of blood, sweat and tears you're risking to gain just a handful of seconds.

Funny things happen in the head of the driver who thirsts to pass everything on the road. If he paused to think, he'd realize he can never do it.

And all too often the driver being passed sees the other driver as a challenge to his car and skill. Crazy but true.

THEY BRISTLE

"Most people resent being passed," says instructor Jack Thornton. "But it's a normal part of driving. There's no need for it to affect you emotionally."

He repeats what defensive driving is all about.

"Your job is to do everything you can to prevent that accident."

Forget about blame. That's a subject that somes up when it's often too late.

"We're not talking about the law but driving to save our skins."

A stream of traffic is like a piece of music, says Mr. Thornton. It has a rhythm, a tempo, and it's up to you to keep to it. That means not too fast, not too slow.

There are some obvious things to remember in the art of passing.

Know your car's capabilities. They're not limitless, any more than yours are.

If there isn't a margin for the unexpected, don't pass. At 60 miles an hour you need half a mile to pass a car and get out of the path of another auto approaching at the same speed.

AN AMBUSH

It could give him that two-second edge which will keep him intact.

FORMULA

There's a four-point formula to keep in mind for making a turn at an intersection know, slow, show, go.

Know what you're going to do before you arrive, slow down gradually for the benefit of the driver behind, show him what's up by signalling your intentions. And go only when the path is clear.

Simple, isn't it? But how many drivers have you seen who are simpler still by ignoring part of it?

Weather: Mainly Cloudy, Few Showers

Sharp Withdraws; Backs Trudeau

First Minister To Drop Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp today withdrew from the Liberal leadership race and called on delegates to the leadership convention to unite behind Justice Minister Trudeau.

Mr Sharp told a news conference his support for Mr. Trudeau is without condition. It was the first withdrawal of a major candidate for Prime Minister Pearson's job.

The finance minister said he had had no conversations with Mr. Trudeau on the leadership issue until he had telephoned him Tuesday about 11:30 p.m. and informed him he was going to withdraw and back the justice minister.

Mr. Sharp said his first-ballot support was better than the polls indicated and that he believes a "high proportion" of his delegates will follow his lead and back Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. Sharp told reporters his conversations with delegates across the country have convinced him that it is Mr. Trudeau who has both broadly-based support and the qualities to lead.

MADE ASESSSMENT

The 57-year-old minister said he had a duty to be realistic in his assessment of his chances for victory in the Saturday balloting. And this assessment had led to his decision to go.

He felt Mr. Trudeau could attract to his cause the kind of people who can give a new vitality, energy and thrust to the political system.

The finance minister's decision followed a late-start campaign which had been interrupted by defeat in the Commons of a government tax bill, necessitating his presence in Ottawa while other candidates toured the country.

Several workers for other candidates attended the news conference in the National Press Building. Workers for former trade minister Winters and Consumer Affairs Minister Turner were conspicuous.

Mr. Sharp said he was taking his action now to release his workers to work for Mr. Trudeau.

He said his campaign workers

Hopefuls Scramble For Votes

The remaining eight serious contenders began a wild scramble to win over Sharp delegates, said to number less than 200.

His withdrawal came just as the great mass of delegates began flooding into the capital for the Thursday start of the convention to pick a successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

The Sharp switch sharply increased the pressure on other leading contenders to make deals with lower-ranked hopefuls to counter the Trudeau campaign, given a substantial boost by Mr. Sharp.

Mr. Sharp called on the 2,450 convention delegates to unite behind Mr. Trudeau as other candidates and their organizations began the all-out convention-eve pitch for the support of the uncommitted.

At the same time there were early indications that Mr. Sharp's delegates were going off in all directions. Each camp was claiming some and some even provided names. It was impossible to say who got most of the Sharp people.

COULD BE RUNAWAY

Most of the deal speculation surrounds External Affairs Minister Martin, running second to Mr. Trudeau for first-ballot support in most polls. There's a common fear among many leading contenders that Mr.

HOPEFUL STATEMENT BY THANT

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— Secretary-General Thant said today he is convinced "meaningful talks" to end the Vietnam war will follow "once all the bombing and other acts of war against North Vietnam are ended."

Thant repeated through a spokesman his belief that such talks "will take place even perhaps within a few days" once the U.S. warlike acts are called off.

He said he was "happy to note" that the initiative leading toward "the promising development of Hanoi's agreement to preliminary talks was taken by President Johnson "in de-escalating the war."

Preliminary Negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Hanoi said today it is ready to talk about a complete U.S. bombing halt so peace negotiations can begin on Vietnam, and President Johnson said "we are very interested in it."

The response, an apparent shift in Hanoi's position, got top attention in Washington. However, U.S. strategists were unwilling to say immediately whether this means the breakthrough in long-stalled efforts to get peace discussions under way.

Hanoi's announcement came in a Vietnamese-language radio broadcast which was picked up by U.S. monitors, translated and rushed to the White House, state department and other key U.S. agencies.

It followed up Johnson's Sunday order to curtail U.S. bombing of the North as an inducement to the Communists to go to the conference table.

The announcement as translated said:

"It is clear that the U.S. government has not correctly and fully responded to the just demand of the DRV (North Vietnamese) government, of U.S. progressive opinion and of world opinion.

"However, on its part, the DRV government declares its readiness to send its representatives to make contact with U.S. representatives to decide with the U.S. side the unconditional cessation of bombing and all other war acts against the DRV so that talks could begin."

The White House had no immediate comment. Presidential press secretary George Christian said "We do not as yet have a full text" of the Hanoi broadcast and there would be "no comment until we have time to read and consider the text."

However a senator who was with Johnson when he received the report said the president was "very interested in this development."

Senator Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) told reporters after a call at the White House that the importance of the Hanoi radio statement is that the North Vietnamese have apparently agreed to some form of discussion without a complete cessation of the U.S. bombing as a precondition.

At Least a Step Forward

The two representatives that Johnson said in his Sunday broadcast would be standing by to join in any peace talks—Ambassadors Averell Harriman and Llewellyn E. Thompson—were in Washington.

Hanoi's response was regarded by U.S. authorities as at least a step forward from North Vietnam's earlier refusal to talk at all.

In Saigon, the English-language Saigon Daily News said President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam will fly to Washington next week for talks with Johnson.

Johnson said Monday he had invited Thieu to visit Washington for discussions on the Vietnam war.

It was still unclear from the initial Hanoi broadcast whether North Vietnam was still sticking to a demand that had been unacceptable to the United States: That there be an unconditional halt to the U.S. air assaults as a pre-condition before any negotiations can be started.

Johnson, in announcing the partial bombing halt in his Sunday night speech, repeated what he has termed his San Antonio formula.

Under this formula, the United States is willing to suspend the bombing if this will lead promptly to productive talks. It also carries an assumption that North Vietnam will not take advantage of the bombing cessation to push its drive against South Vietnam.

The Hanoi broadcast denounced the U.S. "war of aggression" and the continuation of that bombing which is still going on in the southern part of North Vietnam.

And it made no promise about a reduction in North Vietnamese infiltration against the South in reciprocity for the U.S. bombing reduction.

Nonetheless Hanoi's announced willingness even to talk with American envoys about ending the air attacks as a prelude to negotiations apparently caught even her Communist supporters by surprise.

Bombing Dispute Fizzles

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Vietnam's move today in the direction of peace talks took some of the heat out of a row over credibility that some officials thought could provide a propaganda bonanza for North Vietnam.

Administration officials conceded Hanoi could make propaganda profit out of the disclosure that the portion of North Vietnamleft open to air attack under President Johnson's partial bombing ban is actually much bigger than it appeared to be in the president's Sunday night announcement.

Still open to bombing is the area in the southern portion of North Vietnam extending from the demilitarized zone to the 20th parallel. As the crow flies, the distance from the centre of the DMZ to the centre of the 20th parallel is approximately 232 miles: Thus U.S. planes still are allowed to attack 25 per cent of the North's land mass where 10 per cent of the population lives.

CHARGES WAS MISLED

Chairman J. W. Fulbright of the Senate foreign relations committee charged that he was "misled as to the significance" of Johnson's announcement and added:

"The stopping of the bombing is of no consequence and certainly not an inducement for the North to come to the conference table."

Both Senators Robert F. Kennedy and Eugene J. McCarthy, candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, were critical of the bombing-area policy.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, defending the administration, pinned responsibility for any misunderstanding on the state department. He said he knew first-hand that Johnson wanted to define the exact line between the bomb-free area and the continuing attack area of North Vietnam.

"He was dissuaded by his diplomatic colleagues," Mansfield told the Senate, "presumably the state department."

'EXCEPT TO NORTH'

In his address Sunday night, Johnson said he had ordered air and naval attacks on North Vietnam stopped "except in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops

113 Bombing Missions As U.S. Pouring It On

SAIGON (Reuters) — Carrier-based U.S. jets today bombed targets within a mile of the centres of two North Vietnamese cities as the military command again boosted the number of missions flown in the wake of President Johnson's announcement of a partial bombing halt.

A U.S. military spokesman said cargo transfer points one mile south of the centres of both Thanh Hoa and Vinh were blasted by jets streaking in from the Gulf of Tonkin.

The strike near Vinh, 125 miles north of the demilitarized zone, sent a surge of explosions and fires tearing through the storage facility near the transfer point as 500-pound bombs hit, the spokesman said.

He said a truck repair shop just south of Thanh Hoa, 90 miles south of Hanoi, also was bombed.

STRIKE AIRFIELDS

The spokesman said other planes struck at two airfields, neither with runways suitable for MiG jets. One airfield was 22 miles northwest of Thanh Hoa and the other five miles north of Vinh. Both fields have been attacked before.

The new raids, one the third day after Johnson announced the de-escalation move, followed strikes Tuesday which went almost to the 20th parallel — defined in Washington as the bombing limit in clarification of the president's announcement. The spokesman said carrier-based jets Tuesday bombed a railway siding 12 miles northnortheast of Thanh Hoa in their northernmost strike of the day, about a mile from the 20th parallel.

WIRE BRIEFS

Strike Threat Eased

TORONTO (CP)—The United Auto Workers Union today postponed their strike deadline set for 10:30 a.m. Thursday until 10:30 a.m. Monday as negotiations with the Ford Motor Co. of Canada remained deadlocked.

Priests Leaving

Doctors Found Dead

BONN (Reuters)—Three West German doctors, missing in South Vietnam for about eight weeks have been found dead in a mass grave dug by the Viet Cong, the West German foreign ministry said Wednesday. A spokesman said the rector of Hue University, where the three doctors taught, identified their bodies.

LBJ Meets Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson met today for about an hour each with Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Dem., N.Y. The meetings were separate and the White House had almost nothing to say about either one. (See also Page 3.)

'WE NOW HAVE HOPE' —MARTIN

OTTAWA (UPI) —External Affairs Minister Paul Martin said today new Vietnam peace feelers between Hanoi and Washington bring hopes that "the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Martin, pledged Canada's aid in setting up negotiations and enforcing a "durable and just peace in Vietnam."

"This move in itself is not an end to the war in Vietnam," Martin said, "but for the first time in years we can allow ourselves to hope—even to expect—that we are moving toward peace and that the end of that tragic war may be in sight."

Buying Wave Sets Record On Wall St.

NEW YORK — Volume on the New York Stock Exchange today shattered an all-time record that was set only two days ago in the busiest week in the 175-year history of the stock market. (See story Page 14).

Sales poured over the previous record of 17.73 million reached on Monday, the day after President Johnson dramatically decided to de-escalate the bombing of North Vietnam.

The new record of 19.1 million shares followed reports that Hanoi had offered to make a contract with U.S. officials to discuss an "unconditional" end to all bombing in Vietnam and other "acts of war."

The high-speed ticker tape on the New York Stock Exchange ran an unprecedented 47 minutes behind floor trading as volume soared to a record 15,430,000 shares after four hours.

The Dow Jones average gained 5.15 points after having been up 13.12 at 11:30 a.m.

'FLABBERGASTED' BUT 'NO DEAL'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau said today he was "flabbergasted" by Finance Minister Sharp's decision to withdraw from the leadership race and support him.

Trudeau told reporters in Montreal before he left by train for Ottawa shortly after noon, that he was "naturally delighted" with Sharp's decision to support him.

"The decision of Mr. Sharp is a sign of his integrity and generosity — to do this without even consulting me," Trudeau said. "He just phoned me last night saying he was going to do this, whether I liked it or not."

Trudeau denied there had been "a deal" concerning a cabinet post for Sharp if Trudeau wins.

U.S. Opens Offensive To Relieve Khe Sanh

SAIGON (UPI) — Elements of three divisions of U.S. marines, 1st air cavalrymen and South Vietnamese troops opened a major offensive to lift the 74-day-old siege of Khe Sanh today and sent columns of allied tanks and infantrymen to within three miles of the besieged fortress.

The American air cavalrymen carried out a series of leapfrog helicopter assaults in Operations Pegasus against North Vietnamese from the east while U.S. marine tank and other armored weapons moved painfully along east-west Route 9.

The going was slow. At least 17 bridges were knocked out and mines were discovered every 100 yards as the Americans traveled the twisting mountain road that links the 6,000 marines and 1,000 Vietnamese at Khe Sanh with coastal supply areas.

By dusk tonight the column was still about three miles from the besieged base. Military spokesmen said there were upwards of 10,000 North Vietnamese troops surrounding Khe Sanh. Earlier estimates put the figure as high as 20,000.

WIFE CLUNG TO MIRROR DURING COLD RIDE

Tried to Dump Her—But He's Worth It

WIGAN, England (CP) — Motorist John Rigby was fined £25 (about $65) in court Tuesday for "carrying a passenger in a dangerous manner"—his determined wife, Olive, perched on the car's front bumper.

Mrs. Rigby, the court learned, feared her husband was leaving her for another woman one wintry night. So when his car pulled away from home near this Lancashire town, Mrs. Rigby dashed out, jumped on the fron bumper and clung to the rear-view mirrors on the fenders as the car moved off.

Said Rigby, 46, who had pleaded not guilty:

"I kept putting the brakes at about five miles an hour to try and shake Olive off, but she hung on.

"I decided to give her a ride and drove to Wigan at 25 miles an hour. I couldn't go very fast because she was obstructing my view."

Finally after one mirror had snapped off and both windshield wipers broke as Mrs. Rigby grabbed them, the car ran out of gas. As the couple and the other woman walked homewards, the Rigbys were reconciled.

"I only had a suit on and one shoe," says Mrs. Rigby, 40. "It was freezing cold but it was all worth it to keep John."

BENNETT LEADS 'NO' VOTE

'Tough' Marketing Laws For Oil Firms Sidestepped

By JOHN MIKA

The provincial government juggled a hot potato committee report Tuesday which recommended tough laws to regulate marketing of gasoline.

The laws would protect non-brand independents and prohibit giveaway gimmicks.

It was learned that three Socred backbenchers, led by Cyril Shelford, broke ranks within a closed committee meeting to join five opposition MLAs in pushing through the report.

But Premier Bennett led a majority of his party in shouting an emphatic "no" when committee chariman Herb Capozzi asked the legislautre for unanimous consent to allow adoption of his report without notice.

Mr. Bennett later told reporters time is needed to study the report.

But Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) intends to file notice of motion quickly to bring the issue back to the floor of the house with a proposal that a crown corporation be established as a standby gasoline wholesaler for independents to ensure the two-price system is implemented.

The special committee report received by the legislature said

Arthur Mayse

The theme of the Uvic spring symposium was "Community . . . Is It?" and as a student scout tells the story, one of the dissertations presently became cryptic to an almost terrifying degree.

Then, with the mental fog at its thickest, a strange fellow rose from the Island Hall audience. He wore red and blue motley—a costume that went out with the Divine Right of Kings—and bells tinkled as he shook his antic wand.

"Community indicates communication," he declared, "and we are not communicating here. Therefore I suggest we all go swimming."

The guest who broke up the meeting was Joachim Foikis, Vancouver's self-appointed follower of a profession badly in need of reviving.

Mr. Foikis is an authentic cap-and-bells fool, and possibly the first English-speaking one to delight the simple and prick the pompous since Charles I lost his head to Cromwellian Puritanism.

Now Canada Council has bestowed a $3,500 bursary on him, thereby respectabilizing his art and just possibly destroying the artist.

Having absorbed his share of fortune's buffets, however, he may manage to take the Canada Council recognition in his stride. I hope so, because in spite of his soberside detractors, this is a useful man.

We have any number of small-letter fools around, but you won't catch them dispensing the wares that Fool Foikis scatters so lavishly. He has Mother Goose rhymes for children, and limericks and riddles styled for all ages. He also deals in such explosive capsules of truth as he dispensed to the symposium.

Gentle Kim Foikis possesses a further gift that only a handful of Canadians past and present have been blessed with. Like Greg Clark (no fun-poker more kind) and Stephen Leacock who held a sunlit mirror to our foibles, he makes us laugh at ourselves.

There's no laughter so beneficial, either for an individual or a nation. It can dissolve a quarrel of family-shattering potential before irretrievable words are loosed. It could ease Canada's domestic problems if applied.

There are, of course, those who seem incapable of appreciating what a truly dedicated Fool has to offer his city and his country. Twice in the last hour, I have suffered an ear-bending from readers who were shocked practically out of their wits by the grant.

In their view, that $3,500 should have gone to some worthy cause like helping the handicapped or needy.

★

This same refrain was sounded fortissimo by Mayor Campbell of Vancouver, a go-getting young man who has gained the world but appears to be in some danger of losing his own soul.

If you happened to catch the Campbell outburst on little sister television, you may have been struck not only by his Vancouver worship's heat, but by his apparent ignorance of Canada Council's reason for existence.

This is not to bestow charity—after all, we have numerous other agencies concerned with basic good works—but to give promising contributors to the humanities and the arts a needed assist.

The Council is not always wise in its selections, some of whom have managed to keep their talents so thoroughly concealed that no rays escape. In the case of Mr. Foikis, though, I think it acted with commendable wisdom.

Perhaps its recognition of a resurrected art will encourage more Fools to assume the cap and bells of an ancient trade.

I doubt there's a city council, ours included, that wouldn't benefit from the presence of an official Fool.

The same for provincial legislatures, where a warning jingle of bells might reduce long, windy speeches to short, terse ones.

Unfortunately, qualified fools are in short supply, and Joachim Foikis can only spread himself so far. May he prosper, but not too much for his good!

FLYING TO BIG WILLIAMS LAKE EXERCISE

QORs Poised for 'Panther Leap'

Soldiers of the First Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, will be chief participants in a mammoth army exercise labelled Panther Leap next week.

The Esquimalt-based battalion will be flown to Williams Lake in Hercules transports from Patricia Bay starting Thursday, April 11. The move will be accomplished in 51 flights leaving every 45 minutes in a round-the-clock operation.

Northwest of Williams Lake, the battalion will be among 1,600 members of the First Canadian Infantry Brigade Group involved in an exercise covering 1,100 square miles.

It will be the largest military exercise in the B.C. interior since the Second World War.

The First Battalion, QORs, was committed to NATO last year as an integral part of the Allied Command Europe Mobile Force (Land). In this role it must be prepared to fly to Northern Europe on short notice should an emergency arise.

"The exercise is designed to prepare the battalion for this role," said Lt. Col. Herbert C. Pitts," the battalion's commanding officer.

The QORs will play the role of friendly soldiers whose task is to settle a simulated dispute between two opposing forces over land rights, cattle grazing and citizenship.

"This exercise will provide experience that is hard to match in any other location," Col. Pitts said.

"It will be the first time in the past year that our troops, with all their equipment, including the recently-arrived armored personnel carriers, will be able to fly into an exercise area.

"On our arrival at Williams Lake we will immediately assume our operational role and test our ability to move quickly."

The Queen's Own Rifles will be supported by members of Third Field Squadron, Royal Canadian Engineers, from Chilliwack. Return flights to Patricia Bay will begin April 23.

'ONLY THEMSELVES TO BLAME'

Tour Hucksters Face Heave-Ho

Tally-hos and sightseeing buses will vanish from the Causeway after this summer.

A special traffic sub-committee of Victoria city council decided this morning it could find no valid traffic-hazard reasons to ban the buses. But two aldermen and the city manager left no doubt that a total ban on Causeway sightseeing activities would be their recommendation to the city Group B committee and eventually city council.

Traffic engineer Dave Campbell told the committee that road-widening in the vicinity of the Causeway would relieve congestion.

"Parked buses will cause no more trouble than parked cars," he said. "I'm not saying that the buses can operate there forever without causing a traffic problem. But they will not cause a problem for the next two or three years."

The traffic outlook was not enough to satisfy Aldermen Cecil Parrott and committe chairman Hugh Ramsay.

"They (sight-seeing operators) should not be allowed on the Causeway," Ald. Parrot said. "Every year we get dozens and dozens of letters from visitors and residents complaining about their activities. We should pass on the recommendation that they be banned."

Mr. Young agreed.

After reading a report from the engineering department which catalogued three years of inter-company strife and argument, Mr. Young said he had been forced to arrive at the conclusion "that the time has arrived when we must ask these people to operate from private property."

Prior to that Mr. Young said city staff members are tired of acting as arbitrators between rival bus companies fighting for the best spots on the Causeway.

"At the start they used to fight over a space allocation," he said. "When all the space had been used up we thought things might settle down, but then they started to argue as to who should have what space.

"I think we should advise them this September that this was their last year."

Mr. Campbell suggested a survey be taken this summer of visitors to ascertain their feelings on the Causeway as a huckster's paradise.

"You don't need a survey," answered Mr. Young. 'Just sling a camera over your shoulder as I did last year, look like a tourist, and you'll soon find out what the problem is."

Ald. Ramsay, who following the meeting said he is convinced the tour-barkers must go, told the committee the bus tour and tally-ho people had "only themselves to blame."

"Their own over-promotion has brought this situation about," he said.

SCHOOL COSTS

'It's Not Us' Bunn Replies To Peterson

Education Minister Peterson wasn't referring to Greater Victoria school district when he related cost figures in the legislature Tuesday, chairman Peter Bunn said today.

"When Peterson starts giving figures and doesn't attach names to figures, other people do," he said.

Mr Bunn referred to costs per pupil in three adjoining school districts, given by Mr. Peterson at $488, $559 and $750. The minister noted that the standard of education was lowest in the district with the highest cost.

THE OTHER THREE?

"People could easily read into the minister's statement that the districts are Sooke, Saanich and Victoria."

Last year the cost per pupil in this district was $511, "quite a reasonable cost relative to the figures mentioned," Mr. Bunn said.

Part of the value obtained in this district for "reasonably progressive education" is spent on two "highly trained social workers and a school psychologist, for example," which are not common in all districts.

Wage Boost For Firemen In Saanich

Saanich and its 61 fire-fighters have agreed on a new one-year contract, it was announced today.

Settlement avoided arbitration which was indicated last week after talks broke down.

Further meetings were held Monday, Saanich altered its offer and fire-fighters voted approval Tuesday night, said Reeve Hugh Curtis, chairman of the personnel committee.

Average increase for all ranks is 5.25 per cent and the increase for fourth-year fire-fighters and above (38 men) is 6.76 per cent. Saanich earlier offered 6.53 per cent for fourth-year and higher ranks but employees rejected this.

$600 MONTHLY

Second- and third-year fire-fighters will receive $20 a month and there will be no increase for probationary ranks, the first year of service, he said.

A fourth-year fire-fighter now earns $562 a month and will make $600 under the new agreement.

Dean Presents Certificates To Sales Grads

Two students of Victoria Sales and Marketing Executives Club training course were given special recognition as class leaders Tuesday when graduating members went to dinner at the Red Lion Hotel.

Honors went to J. W. Braithwaite, of The Bay, and Linten Queale, of Queal Electronics, members of the first graduating class in the three-year course, offered in association with University of Victoria.

University Dean R. T. Wallace presented certificates to graduates.

Convention Petitions Falling Flat?

The general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Association said today "we've heard nothing further" of petitions being organized to call a special convention.

"I don't anticipate it will be received in our office unless it is a howling success," E. P. O'Connor said in Victoria.

"Nothing has been filed with the association to date."

The petitions began circulating almost a month ago after several militant branches of the association criticized the present leadership for not taking definite action during the two-week ferry strike which ended March 1.

While the association executive responded to a strike call, the ballot was conducted by mail and took a month to complete. The militant branches said simultaneous meetings during the ferry strike could have brought immediate action.

The petitions have to gain 30 per cent approval among the 11,100 BCGEA members before a special convention can be called.

Results of the mail strike vote were disclosed Tuesday.

They showed that 4,690 members supported strike action and 2,133 opposed with about 4,000 members not voting. The association's membership is just under half the 24,000 civil servants in B.C.

The executive took no action to implement the strike vote and has sought a meeting with the cabinet over Bill 33 which specifically outlaws civil service strikes and provides only discretionary, rather than mandatory, binding resolution of unresolved disputes.

Mother Nature Aggravated, Hurls Water at Tormentors

By PETE LOUDON

For about a year now drivers have been edging testily around men and equipment on Cook just north of Hillside.

If they've dug one hole they've dug 10.

City crews are still there today with a compressor and pump, a ditcher, three trucks and a battery of warning flashers.

Assistant city engineer Bill Jorgensen, who has studied the drainage history of Victoria back to the 1860s, tells the story. As far as the workmen are concerned it began a year or so ago when water began to erupt under the stands at Little League Park and in private property.

The immediate suggestion was that a water main was leaking.

The first holes went down as the city began re-lining the main. But when that job was finished, the water kept flowing out of the ground. So another series of holes was punched into the hillside.

The diggers found it wasn't the main. It was an underground stream, runoff from the hill which sits under Spencer Castle near where The Rise runs up to the Smith's Hill Reservoir. A changed drainage pattern set this underground brook to coursing along the path of the main.

The city is putting in an underground collection pit and new drains and the job has become "a big nuisance." But it's not uncommon where a city grows over an area that nature built with numerous springs, streams, bogs and creeks.

And it's hard to credit, but the Wesley subdivision near Cedar Hill and Bay Street once was a lake covering five to 10 acres.

It was drained by a creek that followed the present route of Haultain, Blackwood, Kings, westward to the harbor, passing under the Bay Street Armoury and exiting under the Crowe Gonnason lands.

Kings Road Ravine as it was called was covered in 60 years ago but there's still a massive pipe running along that route, tall enough for a man to walk in.

Generations of men have shunted nature's drainage paths to suit themselves. But once in a while, nature strikes back as it has with the hidden creek on Cook Street.

'Durable Drunk' Sentences Self To 30-Day Term

Charles Bland, 72, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk in the lobby of the Oxford Hotel, 777 Fort St., Tuesday afternoon.

Police said Bland had been evicted from the hotel in the morning but returned later in the day.

The accused has several previous convictions for similar offences, prompting Magistrate Ostler to call him "one of the most durable drunks around."

"If you'll just give me 30 days for this trip," Bland told the magistrate, "I think I'll pull out for Salt Spring Island when I get out."

"You are one of the few people who regularly sets his own sentence in this court," said Magistrate Ostler good-naturedly.

Smith, Minister of Mines, Box 1087 Halifax, Nova Scotia; and Hon. Rene Brunelle, Minister of Mines, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ont. Some salt mining is also carried out in the Prairie Provinces, notably Alberta. For information there write to Hon. A. R. Patrick, Minister of Mines and Minerals, Agriculture Building, Edmonton.

Q. Is there a chess club in the Victoria or Saanich area; if so, who does one contact about joining? D.W.

A. The Victoria City Chess Club meets every Tuesday night at 7:30 in Newstead Hall, 734 Fort St. The president is Charles Birch, 841 Fort St.

$35 Snatch Made

The money was taken while the clerk's attention was distracted. Police said a youth was in the store at the time.

LOOKOUT EXPANSION

Horse, Alpine Trails Planned on Mt. Tolmie

Part of the plan will go to the Capital Improvement District Commission for consideration but most of the work will be done by volunteers, said Coun. Alan Newberry, chairman of the parks and outdoor recreation committee.

"Work should begin almost immediately," he said. "There are 42 acres and the plan covers it all."

TRAILS

The intent is to develop the park with horse and alpine trails, washrooms similar to those in provincial parks, expansion of the lookout at the top and more parking. He noted the reservoir area has been landscaped.

The capital items, such as washrooms and road widening, will go to CIDC and Saanich will go ahead with groups that have expressed an interest on non-capital items.

He said a horseriding club will develop trails according to the Saanich plan.

"The idea is to introduce a little more greenery into the park," he said.

"It will be extensive although it will take a number of years to bring it to completion. Trees and shrubs will be planted."

Belmont Park Names Royalty

She will be crowned at a May Day royal party and fair to be held at John Stubbs Memorial School Saturday, May 18. Gerry Fifield will be princess; Jo-anne Walker, lady-in-waiting; Susan Forrest, flower girl, and Michael Lazaruk, page boy.

All are students at John Stubbs School.

Why Risk Blood, Sweat, Tears For Few Seconds?

How many cars do you drive past every day?

Each one represents a potential accident—involving you. But there are proven techniques for reducing the odds. They are detailed in a defensive driving course being conducted by the Institute of Adult Studies. You can enroll in the next course, begnning April 23, by phoning 385-1411. Fee is $8. In this article Times reporter Don Vipond details some of the tips in the third of the four-lesson course.

By DON VIPOND

When you study defensive driving you learn it's a lot of blood, sweat and tears you're risking to gain just a handful of seconds.

Funny things happen in the head of the driver who thirsts to pass everything on the road. If he paused to think, he'd realize he can never do it.

And all too often the driver being passed sees the other driver as a challenge to his car and skill. Crazy but true.

THEY BRISTLE

"Most people resent being passed," says instructor Jack Thornton. "But it's a normal part of driving. There's no need for it to affect you emotionally."

He repeats what defensive driving is all about.

"Your job is to do everything you can to prevent that accident."

Forget about blame. That's a subject that comes up when it's often too late.

"We're not talking about the law but driving to save our skins."

A stream of traffic is like a piece of music, says Mr. Thornton. It has a rhythm, a tempo, and it's up to you to keep to it. That means not too fast, not too slow.

There are some obvious things to remember in the art of passing.

Know your car's capabilities. They're not limitless, any more than yours are.

If there isn't a margin for the unexpected, don't pass. At 60 miles an hour you need half a mile to pass a car and get out of the path of another auto approaching at the same speed.

AN AMBUSH

The defensive driver lifts his foot off the accelerator and puts it lightly on the brake as he approaches any intersection.

It could give him that two-second edge which will keep him intact.

FORMULA

There's a four-point formula to keep in mind for making a turn at an intersection know, slow, show, go.

Know what you're going to do before you arrive, slow down gradually for the benefit of the driver behind, show him what's up by signalling your intentions. And go only when the path is clear.

Simple, isn't it? But how many drivers have you seen who are simpler still by ignoring part of it?

Last lesson Thursday: The mystery crash.
